

Emerging from the powder room, The Mirage gazed slowly around the cafe with an expression of feigned indifference as he tucked back a wavy length of auburn hair with his left hand. The lack of response from any of the cafe patrons had confirmed his expectations. He had successfully replaced her and none was the wiser.

It had been a brilliant plan really. As the KGB chairman's personal secretary she was constantly protected, except in one place, the restroom. To prepare for the switch, he'd made the necessary adjustments to his appearance the night before and had entered the cafe in the guise of a blonde woman. He'd waited until she got up to use the washroom and then followed her in.

In there, he'd quickly overpowered her and set straight to work. Already disguised as a woman, the trickiest parts of his transformation had already been completed, but replicating her likeness was still a complicated process. Putting in some contacts, his eye color suddenly changed from brown to blue, their hue perfectly matching hers. Pulling off his blonde wig, he'd swapped it for a red one, styling his hair exactly as she had. Her facial structure had been more difficult, but with the aid of special prosthetic pieces and with heavy makeup, he'd succeeded in getting the job done. Stripping her naked and checking his body against hers for any inconsistencies, his only regret was that he didn't have more time. He would've much liked to have played with her a bit first, but he had a job to do. Slipping into her clothes, he'd taken one last look in the mirror, adjusted his dress, and then walked out. As far as everyone else was concerned, he was now Katerina Vasnetsov, the chairman's personal secretary.

The Oxford Handbook of Women and Competition Maryanne L. Fisher, 2017-08-14 While women are generally perceived to be less competitive than men women compete in many ways and in a variety of situations Women try to make themselves look more attractive to draw the attention of a desirable mate They will use gossip as a form of informational warfare to influence reputations They compete as mothers to gain access to resources that directly influence the health of their children They use selfies posted on social media to manipulate others perceptions Women compete all of their lives in the womb through adolescence and adulthood and into their elder years The topic of women s competition has gained significant momentum over the years Edited by Maryanne L Fisher The Oxford Handbook of Women and Competition provides readers with direct evidence of this growth and is one of the first scholarly volumes to focus specifically on this topic Fisher and her team of contributors offer a definitive worldview of the current state of knowledge regarding competition among women today Many of the chapters are grounded within an evolutionary framework allowing for authors to investigate the adaptive nature of women s competitive behaviors motivations and cognition Other chapters rely on alternative frameworks with contributors also asserting that socio cultural forces are the culprit shaping women s competitive drives Additionally several contributors focus their attention on issues faced by adolescent girls and explore the developmental trajectories for young women through adulthood Designed to serve as a source of inspiration for future research and direction The Oxford Handbook of Women and Competition is a stand out scholarly text focusing on the many competitive forces driving women today

Managing Nongovernmental Organizations Frederik Claeyé, 2014-03-26 The idea that international development aid needs to be better managed and coordinated gained currency in the early 1990s The increasing emphasis on management has resulted in the present vogue of managing for development results as one of the central tenets in the discourse on international aid But how appropriate are these ideas tools and techniques for non governmental development organizations NGOs and how much does geographic context matter Examining the current debate on aid effectiveness and the role of NGOs in contributing to it this book highlights the critical importance of understanding how the global and the local interact to increase aid efficacy and develop more culturally astute ways of managing NGOs With a focus on NGOs active in sub Saharan Africa as case studies author Frederik Claey demonstrates that NGOs are not mere passive recipients of management knowledge and practices emanating from the global governance structure of international aid but actively engage with these ideas and practices to translate and rework them through a local cultural lens This process results in the emergence of unique hybrid management systems that combine the pressure to become more business like with the mission to satisfy the demands of the communities they serve
