Constructing the Dynamo of Dixie Courtney Elizabeth Knapp, 2018-03-20 What can local histories of interracial conflict and collaboration teach us about the potential for urban equity and social justice in the future Courtney Elizabeth Knapp chronicles the politics of gentrification and culture based development in Chattanooga Tennessee by tracing the roots of racism spatial segregation and mainstream cosmopolitanism back to the earliest encounters between the Cherokee African Americans and white settlers For more than three centuries Chattanooga has been a site for multiracial interaction and community building yet today public leaders have simultaneously restricted and appropriated many contributions of working class communities of color within the city exacerbating inequality and distrust between neighbors and public officials Knapp suggests that diasporic placemaking defined as the everyday practices through which uprooted people create new communities of security and belonging is a useful analytical frame for understanding how multiracial interactions drive planning and urban development in diverse cities over time By weaving together archival ethnographic and participatory action research techniques she reveals the political complexities of a city characterized by centuries of ordinary resistance to racial segregation and uneven geographic development
