Talking with Tebé Clementine Hunter, 1998 Born in northwest Louisiana in 1886 Called Tebe by her family Hunter lived and worked on Melrose Plantation for more than 75 years In colors as bright as the Louisiana sky she shows the backbreaking work required to pick cotton gather figs cut sugar cane and harvest pecans

Tebe's art portrays the good times too. Scenes of baptisms, weddings, and church socials celebrate a rich community life that helped the workers survive. Hunter's work holds a special place in art history. She was the first self-taught artist to receive a fellowship from the Rosenwald Fund in 1945 and the first self-taught African American woman artist to receive national media attention. Between 1945 and 1987, over fifty museums and galleries showed her works. Some writers have called Clementine Hunter a creative genius. To others, she was not a real artist but a plantation Negro. Many were surprised that an older woman with no training could produce art at all. Now considered one of the finest folk artists.

Notable American Women Susan Ware, 2004. This latest volume brings the project up to date with entries on almost 500 women whose death dates fall between 1976 and 1999. You will find here stars of the golden ages of radio, film, dance, and television; scientists and scholars; civil rights activists and religious leaders; Native American craftspeople and world-renowned artists. For each subject, the volume offers a biographical essay by a distinguished authority that integrates the woman's personal life with her professional achievements, set in the context of larger historical developments.

North American Women Artists of the Twentieth Century Jules Heller, Nancy G. Heller, 2013-12-19. First Published in 1997. North American Women Artists of the Twentieth Century. A Biographical Dictionary was created to fill a gap of there being a comprehensive reference work like this available, even though the bibliography in English on various aspects of the history of women artists has grown exponentially during the past ten years. As researchers, the editors have been frustrated many times by being unable to locate basic information about many of the artists included in this volume, especially those working outside the United States. This leads directly to another reason for producing this particular kind of reference book: to try and create a better understanding between and among the artists and art audiences in these countries.

We Are Made of Stories Leslie Umberger, 2022-10-04. A richly illustrated history of self-taught artists and how they changed American art. Artists without formal training who learned from family, community, and personal journeys have long been a presence in American art. But it wasn't until the 1980s, with the help of trailblazing advocates, that the collective force of their creative vision and bold self-definition permanently changed the mainstream art world. In We Are Made of Stories, Leslie Umberger traces the rise of self-taught artists in the twentieth century and examines how, despite wide-ranging societal racial and gender-based obstacles, they redefined who could be rightfully seen as an artist and revealed a much more diverse community of American makers. Lavishly illustrated throughout, We Are Made of Stories features more than one hundred drawings, paintings, and sculptures ranging from the narrative to the abstract, by forty-three artists including James Castle, Thornton Dial, William Edmondson, Howard Finster, Bessie Harvey, Dan Miller, Sister Gertrude Morgan, the Philadelphia Wireman, Nellie Mae Rowe, Judith Scott, and Bill Traylor. The book centralizes the personal stories behind the art and explores enduring themes including self definition cultural heritage struggle and joy and inequity and achievement At the same time it offers a sweeping history of self taught artists the critical debates surrounding their art and how museums have gradually diversified their collections across lines of race gender class and ability Recasting American art history to embrace artists who have been excluded for too long We Are Made of Stories vividly captures the power of art to show us the world through the eyes of another Published in association with the Smithsonian American Art Museum
