AE-1

THE AE-1 SALES SENSATION

Few new cameras have caused as much of a sensation as has the Canon AE-1. Complete shutter-speed-preferred automation in a compact package—digital-logic memory—super-sophisticated integrated-circuit design. All this in a camera that sells for a surprisingly affordable price.

Canon's marketing department introduced the AE-1 with full-scale promotion. Fortunately, the service department kept pace. Canon first presented an excellent series of repair seminars for its warranty people. Yet the factory wanted to reach the independent repair technicians as well. So Canon provided the practice equipment for the 1977 National Camera Area Workshops covering the AE-1 and its partners in automation, the Speedlite 155A and the Power Winder A.

To help us put together the Workshop program, Canon invited us to participate in one of the warranty seminars. This was the first seminar-type facto session we've had the privilege to attend. And we're grateful to Canon for the information they presented.
