The Gospel of Climate Skepticism Robin Globus Veldman, 2019-10-22 Why are white evangelicals the most skeptical major religious group in America regarding climate change Previous scholarship has pointed to cognitive factors such as conservative politics anti science attitudes aversion to big government and theology Drawing on qualitative fieldwork The Gospel of Climate Skepticism reveals the extent to which climate skepticism and anti environmentalism have in fact become embedded in the social world of many conservative evangelicals Rejecting the common assumption that evangelicals skepticism is simply a side effect of political or theological conservatism the book further shows that between 2006 and 2015 leaders and pundits associated with the Christian Right widely promoted skepticism as the biblical position on climate change The Gospel of Climate Skepticism offers a compelling portrait of how during a critical period of recent history political and religious interests intersected to prevent evangelicals from offering a unified voice in support of legislative action to address climate change

Great Powers, Climate Change, and Global Environmental Responsibilities Robert Falkner, Barry

Buzan, 2022-01-10 This book is the first of its kind to examine the role of great powers in the international politics of climate change. It develops a novel analytical framework for studying environmental power in international relations: what counts as a great power in the environmental field and what their special environmental responsibilities are. In doing so, the book connects International Relations (IR) debates on power inequality, great powers and great power management with global environmental politics. GEP scholarship. The book brings together leading scholars in IR and GEP whose contributions focus on major environmental powers: United States, China, European Union, India, Brazil, Russia, and international institutions and issue areas: UN Security Council, multilateral environmental agreements, international climate leadership, coal politics. The contributors to this volume examine how individual great powers have responded to the global climate challenge and whether they have accepted a special responsibility for stabilizing the global climate. They place emerging discourses on great power responsibility in the context of wider debates about international environmental leadership and climate change securitization. And they provide new insights into how international power inequality intersects with the global ecological crisis and what special role great powers could and should play in the international fight against global warming. Climate Change 1995: Economic and Social Dimensions of Climate Change Hoesong Yi, Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change.

Working Group III., 1996-06-27 The consequences of climate change for society are analysed in this landmark assessment from the IPCC. This book assesses the available knowledge on the many issues that society has to face, including the international decision-making framework, applicability to climate change of techniques for assessing costs and benefits, the significant social costs of projected climate change, and the economic assessment of policy instruments to combat climate change nationally and internationally. Some important conclusions of this Second Assessment Report indicate that 10 to 30% of greenhouse gas emissions in most countries can be reduced at negative or zero cost: no regrets measures. Also, the literature indicates that climate change will cause aggregate net damage, which provides an economic rationale for going beyond no regrets measures. It also indicates that a portfolio of mitigation, adaptation, and research measures is a sound strategy for addressing climate change given the remaining uncertainties. This report speaks directly to the issues that are faced by the many countries committed to limit emissions of greenhouse gases by the year 2000 and currently negotiating actions to be taken beyond that date. Will be of great value to the international community of policymakers interested in the consequences of climate change as well as to economists, social, and natural scientists. Environmental Science Michael L.
