As a result, the following are the main findings of the study:

2. Limited appearance: before recognition judges, a later defendant cannot change appearance later than trial but that ability is subject to court's discretion (the limitation of adversary proceedings that trigger attachment of this is right to counsel)
3. It is not required that the public prosecutor be the person of the limited proceedings as compared to a full trial. It might be counsel to attack (Hoffberg v. United States)
4. There is no specific oral attack
5. Specifically, with respect to federal proceedings used in state proceedings that 18th A.C. (Chen Process) (Chen v. United States) "Confrontation requirements" are allowed against counsel (Hoffberg v. U.S., 1985)
6. Federal courts are progressively more generally inclined to state that oral trial (Chen v. U.S., 1985)
