Canadian Studies In The New Millennium 2nd Second Revised Edition 2008:

States of Disorder Dan Halvorson, 2016-04-01 There have always been weak or fragile states in the modern era or poorly governed and disorderly political communities in earlier times Yet the idea of state failure has only acquired such prominence in the post Cold War period Why would many countries in the less developed world be considered failed states after 1990 but not in 1965 when there is little meaningful difference in their observable empirical conditions What counts as state failure is ultimately a subjective political judgement made by the great powers of the day This judgement is based on the sensitivity of great powers to particular types of disorder generated from the periphery in different historical periods This book is a comparative history of the conditions under which great powers care enough about disorder from the periphery to mount costly armed interventions to reverse what they deem to be state failure Arameans, Chaldeans, and Arabs in Babylonia and Palestine in the First Millennium B.C. Angelika Berlejung, Michael P. Universally Comprehensible, Arrogantly Local Wiebke Keim, 2017-04-01 From the perspective of the international scholarly community under North Atlantic domination South Africa might look like a peripheral place of knowledge production In recent years a plethora of voices calling for provincializing Europe for deconstructing Eurocentrism and for adopting post and decolonial perspectives have challenged such views. They have partly transformed the academic landscape but have had limited success in challenging the fundamental global divides in production, circulation and recognition of social scientific knowledge. This book chooses a different take on the question of how North Atlantic domination could be challenged by conceptualizing counter hegemonic currents in international sociology. Instead of providing theoretical and deconstructive critiques, counter hegemonic currents are effective through collective social scientific practice: the production of data, knowledge and texts of new generations of scholars, the interaction with extra university actors leading to the gradual emergence of integrated and productive scientific communities. Their orientation towards local arenas of discussion and production of socially relevant research effectively reduces the belief in the hegemony of the North. The historical development of South African labour studies is a case in point. This study provides a systematic in depth analysis of research and teaching activities, networks with extra academic actors and international cooperation over time in the three major Labour Studies centres: Johannesburg, Durban and Cape Town. It draws on a rich variety of material including annual reports of research centres and labour service organizations, teaching contents and exam questions, the 1974-2003 volumes of the South African Labour Bulletin and newsletters of ISA Research Committee 44 on Labour Movements. Qualitative analysis of four seminal books is used to assess their contribution to original general theory building. In depth interviews with Labour Studies representatives complement the analysis of documents and literature by reconstructing the oral history of this scholarly community, an indispensable source given that many debates could not appear in written form or had to be watered during the Apartheid years. The study concludes that over time South African social scientists have generated knowledge on labour, industry and trade unions that is universally comprehensible but arrogantly local.

The Puritan Millennium Crawford Gribben, 2008-07-01. Puritanism was an intensely eschatological movement. From the beginnings of the movement, Puritan writers developed eschatological interests in distinct contexts and often for conflicting purposes. Their reformist agenda emphasized their eschatological hopes. In a series of readings of texts by John Foxe, James Usser, George Gillespie, John Rogers, John Milton and John Bunyan, this book provides an interdisciplinary exploration of Puritan thinking about the last things.
