Cancers in the Urban Environment Thomas M. Mack,2021 Cancers in the Urban Environment How Malignant Diseases Are Caused and Distributed among the Diverse People and Neighborhoods of a Major Global Metropolis Second Edition provides a detailed description of the occurrence of common forms of cancer in the ethnically socially and environmentally complex milieu of a modern urban complex The location is Los Angeles County and the patterns of 72 different malignancies are described according to race age sex social class calendar time since 1972 and most notably individual neighborhood using detailed maps of high risk This second edition uses twice as many cases and more demographic diversity Physicians and scientific investigators in California and elsewhere can use the material provided to counsel patients and evaluate the consistency of any specific pattern of occurrence with each specific causal hypothesis A detailed appendix describes the source of data provides the basis for the choices made in the production of the volume and gives a perspective on the search for clusters of malignancy

Cancers in the Urban Environment Thomas M. Mack,2004-07-21 This volume the first of its kind ever is designed to provide both laypersons and professionals with a detailed description of the occurrence of each common form of cancer in the ethnically socially and environmentally complex milieu of a modern urban complex The place is Los Angeles County and the patterns of 72 different malignancies are described according to race age sex social class calendar time since 1972 and most notably individual neighborhood using detailed maps of high risk The book permits residents to screen the malignancies and identify those of special concern locally and to identify other communities with similar concerns The pattern of each malignancy is briefly discussed with reference to background knowledge of causation and the degree to which the observed pattern was expected on that basis Persons residing outside Los Angeles County will identify patterns likely to prevail in their own communities Physicians and scientific investigators in California and elsewhere can use the material provided to counsel patients and evaluate the consistency of any specific pattern of occurrence with each specific causal hypothesis A detailed appendix describes the source of data provides the basis for the choices made in the production of the volume and gives a perspective on the search for clusters of malignancy Compares different types of cancers with respect to the degree of non random occurrence Contains numerous maps detailing the demographic and geographic pattern of cancer occurrence in Los Angeles County Provides an empirical perspective to the search for disease clusters

Cancers in the Urban Environment Thomas M. Mack,Myles Cockburn,2004-06-28 The book permits residents to screen the malignancies and identify those of special concern locally and to identify other communities with similar concerns The pattern of each malignancy is briefly discussed with reference to background knowledge of causation and the degree to which the observed pattern was expected on that basis Persons residing outside Los Angeles County will identify patterns likely to prevail in their own communities Publisher description LoC

Geospatial Approaches to Energy Balance and Breast Cancer David Berrigan,Nathan A. Berger,2019-07-15 Cancer occurs in specific places and spaces each of which have identifiable geographic coordinates characterized by unique natural built and social characteristics all of which contribute significantly to cancer across the spectrum from etiology through diagnosis treatment and outcomes In the first volume of this series published in 2010 a single chapter was focused on these geographic influences Since then the field of geospatial studies of cancer prevention and control has exploded in approaches and applications Accordingly this volume focuses on what has now become a very specific research endeavor Geospatial Factors Impacting Breast Cancer The book provides important insights into this relatively new and rapidly developing field It should be of value to all students of the Energy Balance Cancer Series and a wide ranging introduction to problems in cancer prevention and control for geographers demographers and other researchers with a geospatial perspective Moreover it provides important information for all oncologists endocrinologists and behavioral modification professionals to better understand their patients in the context of their environment It should also provide important considerations for physicians scientists public health professionals and disparity investigator planning clinical trials community interventions and community planning

Environmental Health Perspectives, 1993 Cancer Epidemiology in China: What We Have Learnt So Far? Jianguang Ji, Tianhui Chen, Xiaochen Shu, Hao Liu, 2020-04-13

After several decades of development the socialist market economy of China is now the world's second largest economy by nominal GDP China is also the largest economy by purchasing power parity according to the International Monetary Fund In tandem with the development of the Chinese economy China's cancer burden is rising rapidly due to an ageing population and the adoption of unhealthy lifestyle behaviours According to the data from the National Central Cancer Registry NCCR of China the incidence and mortality of cancer have been increasing rapidly in China In recent years cancer has been the leading cause of death among city residents and the second cause of death among rural residents which has become a stark public health issue in China According to the NCCR an estimated 4.29 million new incident cases 12 thousand per day and 2.81 million death cases 7.5 thousand per day would occur in 2015 in China This corresponds to the age standardized incidence rate ASIR of 201.1 per 100 000 and age standardized mortality rate ASMR of 126.9 per 100 000 respectively Due to the geographical and ethnical disparities in living habits and healthcare level the cancer spectrum differs between different regions and ethnical groups in China According to the estimation from IARC the incidence of nasopharyngeal carcinoma and liver cancer is the world's highest in specific regions of China The incidence of some cancer types in Chinese urban areas such as colorectal prostate kidney and bladder cancers is similar to that in developed countries or regions where the incidence of cancer is highly associated with obesity and westernised lifestyles Nevertheless the incidence of some common cancer types in rural areas including oesophageal stomach liver and cervical cancers shares similarity with less developed countries or regions in the world where cancers are associated with chronic infectious agents due to poverty In addition the mortality rate is higher in rural areas which suggests a poorer cancer prognosis due to late diagnosis and/or unsatisfying clinical treatment The distinct cancer patterns of different regions and/or ethnic groups indicate a need for precise cancer prevention and control plans tailored for different geographical regions and/or ethnic groups The overarching goal of the proposed Frontiers in Oncology Research Topic is to present current perspectives on cancer epidemiology in Chinese characteristics and provide current knowledge of cancer burden as well as cancer mortality to academic investigators clinicians and stakeholders from the translational clinical and public health communities

The Impact of Specific Environmental Exposures on Breast, Lung, and Colon Cancer: Advancing Public Health Strategies for Enhanced Outcomes Chitra Thakur, Fei Chen, Uttara Saran, 2025-02-27 Breast lung and colon cancers pose significant global health challenges necessitating a focused examination of the environmental factors that influence their development and progression According to the World Health Organization WHO these cancers are major contributors to morbidity and mortality worldwide Early detection and treatment as well as avoiding risk factors have been pivotal in reducing the disease burden By delving into the intricate interplay between the environment and these specific cancers we can develop targeted strategies to reduce incidence and optimize disease outcomes and in turn improve public health Beyond genetic predisposition various environmental factors impact an individual's risk of developing breast lung and colon cancer For instance tobacco smoke environmental pollutants and dietary habits are major risk factors making them prime targets for public health interventions Lung cancer is strongly associated with tobacco use and exposure to second hand smoke which account for approximately 85% of all lung cancer cases According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention CDC lung cancer is the leading cause of cancer related deaths in both men and women responsible for more deaths than breast colon and prostate cancers combined In the case of colon cancer dietary habits including high consumption of processed foods and red meat are associated with an increased risk Sedentary lifestyles and obesity are additional factors that can exacerbate the risk of this cancer type According to the WHO approximately 1 in 10 colorectal cancer cases could be prevented by adopting a healthy diet In the case of breast cancer exposure to environmental pollutants and endocrine disrupting chemicals has emerged as a significant concern These pollutants such as polychlorinated biphenyls PCBs and certain pesticides can mimic hormones in the body potentially leading to the development and progression of breast cancer According to the WHO environmental pollution contributes to approximately 1 in 6

Sex Differences in Cancer Incidence, Mortality, and Survival: Methodological Perspectives Syed Ahsan Raza, Wilson Luiz Da Costa Junior, Aaron Thrift, 2024-08-01 Population based cancer registries across the world represent an important source of information on cancer incidence these are used for many purposes including a region wise comparison of trends for different types of cancers and for generating hypotheses Among the available statistics for studying cancer trends the most valuable data is of incidence rate that comes from recording every case of cancer in a defined geography in a specified time But there is a downside in relying on published incidence rates from cancer registries Namely the published rates are not only determined by the real underlying cancer incidence rates but also on such regional phenomena as access to diagnostic services practices in the medical communities quality and completeness of reporting of cancer diagnoses to the local cancer registries quality of the cancer registry itself and data management systems These methodological aspects can vary from country to country and can even vary within countries National Cancer Institute Monograph National Cancer Institute (U.S.),1959 Atlas of U.S. Cancer Mortality Among Whites, 1950-1980 ,1987
