

Critical Issues

How Do I Pass This Test?

One thing we get asked more than any other question is, "How do I pass the test?" Your first step after receiving the study guide is to get the outline for that particular test. For each of the Excelsior exams, Excelsior College provides free content outline guides. To obtain these, you may log on to the Excelsior website at www.excelsior.edu and download directly from there. If you do not have Internet access, you may call Excelsior at 1-800-647-2368, and they will mail you the content outline. For CLEP tests, you can log on to www.collegeboard.com/CLEP or call CLEP at 1-800-257-9558. CLEP may charge a fee for this outline. The CLEP and Excelsior outlines will list what may be covered on the actual exam.

Once you receive the outline, use it to study the Chancellor's guide. First, read through the entire guide and take the practice quizzes. Then use the content outline to reread and focus your studies. Make sure that you know all the information in the guide, but also be sure to pay special attention to what is listed on the outline. Once you have completed reading and studying the study guide, take the practice exam. If there are questions that you guess at the answer or that you miss, go back and study that section again. Also, use the audiotapes that Chancellor's sends you. You can put them in the tape player in your car and listen while you drive to work. The subliminal learning may just help you pass the test. One thing to keep in mind is that these tests ARE passable. Chancellor's has a very high success rate. Do not be discouraged; you can pass the test!

Humanities

In order to pass this test, you must do some outside work. You cannot expect to pass an exam that focuses 50% on literature and 50% on fine art if you do not look at any artwork or read any literature. There are several books listed in the preface of the Humanities study guide that you may want to get from your local library. Also, Chancellor's supplies a floppy disk with your study guide. Put this disk into your computer's disk drive, and open the program in Microsoft Word. This is a list of illustrations to study; it is also printed in the back of your guide. Your computer must be connected to the Internet before you click on one of the links in this list. When you click, you will be automatically sent to a picture of that particular piece of artwork or architecture. There will also be information about the creator of the artwork or architecture. Be sure to read this information. On the actual exam, you may be given a picture of a painting. You will then be asked several questions about the painting; these may include, "Who painted it?" or "What movement was this?" The only way to answer these questions is to familiarize yourself with these movements prior to the test.

To prepare for the literature section, you will need to look at anthologies of literature. These can be found at your local library. You want to check out anthologies of different types of literature. For example, there will be an anthology of world literature, an anthology of American literature, an anthology of British literature, and so on. Because of the broad scope of humanities, you need to look at as many of these anthologies as you can. In your study guide, you will see many writers' names in bold print. This is a good clue that you will want to read at least one piece of literature that they have written. You need to familiarize yourself with the writer's style, any famous writings he or she has done, and of what movement he or she was a part. On the actual exam, you may be given a poem and then asked several questions about it, including, "Who wrote it?" or "What movement was this?" You may also be asked what the poet is trying to say, so prepare yourself to analyze works. This exam will be unlike any other that you will take for your B.N. degree. Allow yourself some time to study for the Humanities exam. Remember that half the battle is convincing yourself you can do this!

Microbiology and Anatomy & Physiology

Studying for these two tests is very similar. When you study for either of these, your focus is going to be on memorization. The best way to memorize a lot of material quickly is to make flash cards. If you do this for both study guides, you may want to make them in different colors, so you remember which terms are from which guide. When you do this, you will probably have a very large stack of flash cards. In order to memorize all of those terms, you may want to break them down into groups. Start with ten flashcards, memorize those, and once you know all those terms, add five or ten more flashcards. Before you know it, you will be able to identify all the terms you need for the exam. Because these two subjects focus heavily on memorization of terms, we recommend that you do not take them concurrently or consecutively. After you have completed one, take a general exam, and then start the other one. For example, complete A&P, then take Lifespan Psychology, then start Microbiology. Your brain will thank you for the break.
