

HOW TO USE THE DADO

HOW TO USE THE DADO — Craftsman Dado Sets are designed and manufactured to fill exacting requirements. As with other precision tools, correct use leads to best results. The following steps will help you get the most from your dado set.

A

C

1. Setting the Dado Head — Select the correct parts for desired width of cut. For $\frac{1}{4}$ in. width groove, use one outside cutter alone. For $\frac{1}{2}$ in. width groove use two outside cutters. For grooves wider than $\frac{1}{4}$ in. add enough inside cutters to make desired width of cut. Use paper or cardboard washers to make fine adjustments. Always use inside cutters positioned between outside cutters — never alone.

2. Mounting the Dado — Start by placing one outside cutter next to inside saw flange. When using the two outside cutters without an inside cutter, stagger teeth as shown in Photo A, so that the teeth of one cutter do not touch and damage the teeth of the other cutter.

3. Arranging Inside Cutters — When inside cutters are used between the outside cutters, be sure the cutting edges of the inside cutters are in line with the bottom of the gullet of the outside cutters as shown in Photo B. Maintain this position while tightening dado on saw arbor. When using more than one inside cutter, space the cutting edges of the cutters evenly, as shown. This equalizes the cutting load and makes a smoother cut.

4. Adjusting Width of Cut — For large adjustments add or remove cutters. For fine adjustments use thin paper washers between the outside blades and the inside cutters. When inside cutters are used, both outside cutters must be used.

5. Securing the Assembly — Photo C shows complete assembly. Check rotation arrows on outside cutters, to make sure dado head is in correct rotating position. Be sure the arbor nut is tightened securely. If arbor is of sufficient length, use the outside flange. If the arbor is not long enough, it is standard practice to leave off the outside flange in order to obtain maximum thread for the nut. Always Install Dado Insert on Bench Saw and Blade Guard on the Radial-Arm Saw. Rotate the dado one full turn by hand before turning on machine to be sure the dado turns freely and does not strike against any part of the table, insert, guard, or motor housing.

6. Making the Cut — Operate the dado head the same as you do a circular saw blade. Position head to obtain the depth of cut desired. Check your settings with a piece of scrap lumber. When making deep cuts, do so in successive steps to prevent overloading of machine and to obtain smoother cuts. Feed at moderate speed — the wider and deeper the cut, the slower the speed.

It's simple to make straight dado and rabbet cuts, do angle dadoing, ploughing; also to make bevel, tongue-and-groove, tenoning, grooving, fluting cuts. In making heavy cuts on a radial-arm saw — be sure you push the dado over the work rather than pull it and always use blade guard.
