CONFIGURATION

The VMAX 40K array configurations are designed for extensive storage environments. The array configurations include at least one system bay that can house from one to three engines, and a number of half or full populated storage bays, depending on the number of engines in the array. Angled into the one full population width that houses drives, CPU power, network (host) and back-end connectivity to other in the array.

The maximum array configuration size depends on the type of One Array Architecture (OAA) used. If one 15-bay standard OAA is used, the maximum array configuration includes an eight-bay system bay and 13 storage bays. If two 15-bay OAA bays are configured, the maximum configuration consist of a system bay and 13 half storage bays. Both full types can be used within the array but not within the same storage bay.

Each bay occupied storage bays and dedicated one bay is connected to a dedicated engine in the system bay. Depending on the array the bays connected to the engine, they are referred to as dedicated or shared OAA.

System Bay operates in an array management action mode for arrays with three or more engines. The second, physically separated system bay is used when a single OAA (15-bay OAA) is used. In a second OAA (15-bay OAA) is used, the system bay is used as a subsequent engine are added to the array. The angled system bay placement is suitable for data centers that cannot accommodate large, contiguous array placements. The maximum distance between both system bays is 21.6m (71.1 ft).
