The Fur Country: Seventy Degrees North Latitude Jules Verne, 2020-09-28 An immense brick and earthenware stove occupied the centre of the room with a huge iron pipe passing from it through the ceiling and conducting the dense black smoke into the outer air This stove contained a roaring fire constantly fed with fresh shovelfuls of coal by the stoker an old soldier specially appointed to the service Now and then a gust of wind drove back a volume of smoke into the room dimming the brightness of the lamps and adding fresh blackness to the beams of the ceiling whilst tongues of flame shot forth from the stove But the guests of Fort Reliance thought little of this slight inconvenience the stove warmed them and they could not pay too dearly for its cheering heat so terribly cold was it outside in the cutting north wind The storm could be heard raging without the snow fell fast becoming rapidly solid and coating the already frosted window panes with fresh ice The whistling wind made its way through the cranks and chinks of the doors and windows and occasionally the rattling noise drowned every other sound Presently an awful silence ensued Nature seemed to be taking breath but suddenly the squall recommenced with terrific fury The house was shaken to its foundations the planks cracked the beams groaned A stranger less accustomed than the habitu s of the fort to the war of the elements would have asked if the end of the world were come But with two exceptions Captain Craventy s guests troubled themselves little about the weather and if they had been outside they would have felt no more fear than the stormy petrels disporting themselves in the midst of the tempest Two only of the assembled company did not belong to the ordinary society of the neighbourhood two women whom we shall introduce when we have enumerated Captain Craventy s other guests these were Lieutenant Jaspar Hobson Sergeant Long Corporal Joliffe and his bright active Canadian wife a certain Mac Nab and his wife both Scotch John Rae married to an Indian woman of the country and some sixty soldiers or employ s of the Hudson s Bay Company The neighbouring forts also furnished their contingent of guests for in these remote lands people look upon each other as neighbours although their homes may be a hundred miles apart A good many employ s or traders came from Fort Providence or Fort Resolution of the Great Slave Lake district and even from Fort Chippeway and Fort Liard further south A rare break like this in the monotony of their secluded lives in these hyerborean regions was joyfully welcomed by all the exiles and even a few Indian chiefs about a dozen had accepted Captain Craventy s invitation They were not however accompanied by their wives the luckless squaws being still looked upon as little better than slaves The presence of these natives is accounted for by the fact that they are in constant intercourse with the traders and supply the greater number of furs which pass through the hands of the Hudson s Bay Company in exchange for other commodities They are mostly Chippeway Indians well grown men with hardy constitutions Their complexions are of the peculiar reddish black colour always ascribed in Europe to the evil spirits of fairyland They wear very picturesque cloaks of skins and mantles of fur with a head dross of eagle s feathers spread out like a lady s fan and quivering with every motion of their thick black hair

South Boston Branch,1879 Enlightened Zeal Theodore Binnema,2014-03-21 Enlightened Zeal examines the fascinating history of the Hudson's Bay Company's involvement in scientific networks during the company's two hundred year chartered monopoly. Working from the company's voluminous records, Ted Binnema demonstrates the significance of science in the company's corporate strategies. Initially highly secretive about all of its activities, the HBC was by 1870 an exceptionally generous patron of science. Aware of the ways that a commitment to scientific research could burnish its corporate reputation, the company participated in intricate symbiotic networks that linked the HBC as a corporation with individuals and scientific organizations in England, Scotland, and the United States. The pursuit of scientific knowledge could bring wealth and influence along with tribute, fame, and renown, but science also brought less tangible benefits: adventure, health, happiness, male companionship, self-improvement, or a sense of meaning. The first study of scientific research in any chartered company over the entire course of its monopoly, Enlightened Zeal expands our understanding of social networks in science, establishes the vast scope of the HBC's contribution to public knowledge, and will inspire new research into the history of science in other chartered monopolies.
