

1. Put the turns of thread on the board

2. Slip all the loops off the posts, except for the bottom post. Straighten out the entire thing while maintaining a slight tension on the moving end

3. Twist the strands around 2200 turns, give or take. Keep it under enough tension that it won't link up on itself (my half inch drill laying on a chair is enough tension)

4. Hang 3 or 4 ounces of weight from the center, and swing the drill end back around to the hooks while keeping tension on the whole thing. I set the board on my ironing board so it's up off the floor to ease my back, and to allow the weights to hang down.

5. Slide the twisted thread from the drill back onto the same hook as the other end, put the drill down on the center where the weights are, remove the weights, reverse the drill, and "untwist" about 1000 turns or so. Tie a knot in the thick ends so it won't come apart.
