

Global ecosystems:

Process	Description
Photosynthesis	The process that links producers and consumers in the form of a single life cycle.
Energy flow	The process of the connection between producers and consumers in a food chain.
Energy capture	Energy is captured from the environment into sugars. The most efficient of these are plants that convert energy from the sun by photosynthesis.
Energy storage	The energy from the sugars produced by the producers. A plant itself is a good example because it stores energy.
Energy transfer	Energy is transferred from one level to another and is used in various ways. Energy is transferred from the sun to producers, then to consumers, and finally to decomposers.

Ecology is a study of the interactions between organisms and their environment. These are often interdependent, between the living and the non-living components of an ecosystem. Abiotic components are the living features of an ecosystem such as plants and fish. Biotic components are non-living environmental factors such as climate, soil, water temperature and light.

Global Ecosystems:

- Hot desert (30 degree north or south equator)
- Tundra (polar areas or 60-70 degree north equator)
- Tropical savanna (20-30 north/south equator)
- Tropical rainforest (close to the equator)
- Deciduous forest (30-40 degree north equator)
- Polar (Arctic and Antarctic)

Large-scale ecosystems are known as global ecosystems (biomes). These are defined by the dominant type of vegetation that grows in a region. Global ecosystems form broad belts of vegetation from west to east parallel to lines of latitude, variations are due to weather patterns, water and distribution of land and sea. These factors produce small variations in temperatures and moisture which in turn affect the ecosystems.

The living world

- Small scale ecosystems
 - Biomes
- Tropical rainforest
- deforestation
- Hot deserts

Hot deserts:

Deserts are found in subtropical areas between 20° and 30° north and south of the equator. The Tropic of Cancer or the Tropic of Capricorn passes through most of the world's hot desert regions. This climate is characterized by high temperatures and low rainfall. This results in extremely arid conditions. The definition of a desert is an area that receives less than 250mm of rainfall per year. Surprisingly, the top layer of soil in the desert is very fertile due to the rotting of biotic components but erodes easily due to the lack of roots to hold it together. An example of adapted biotic feature is an acacia tree. Case study: The Western Desert, the impact of mining on the environment.

Impacts of deforestation:

Deforestation is the clearing of forests on a large scale. The main reasons for rapid deforestation is clearing land for agriculture, logging for wood, building roads and expansion of urban areas. Malaysia is a country in South East Asia, 87% of the country is covered by rainforest and the rate of deforestation is decreasing rapidly. The land is being used for commercial selective logging, city development such as the Iskandar Dam this forested 700km² of forest and farmland. Mineral extraction, mainly tin and uranium and Palm Oil Plantations. This leads to erosion, loss of biodiversity, contributes to climate change but economic development. In order to preserve the rainforest, it must be managed effectively. By doing so, it ensures the rainforest will remain a valuable resource for future generations, it also a less valuable rainforest resources to be used sustainably. Local governments can participate in many schemes such as Agriculture, re-planting schemes and ecotourism.

Tropical Rainforests:

Tropical rainforests are found in a broad belt through the Tropics in Central and South America, Africa, Southeast Asia and the Caribbean region. As tropical rainforests occur near or close to the equator, the climate is typically warm and wet. The equatorial zone, where they are found, is characterized by high rainfall and high temperatures. Temperatures above 20°C. Tropical rainforest soils are surprisingly infertile. They are mostly thin and poor. Rain washes away nutrients in the process of leaching. Key adaptations of plants in the rainforest are epiphytes (allows plants to sit on the leaves of other trees), buttresses (help to support the base of the tree as the trees grow tall) and lianas (plants live on the branches of the canopy and obtain nutrients from water and air not soil).
