The second half of the book features interdisciplinary case studies each of which focuses on a specific issue.

Schools as Zones of Peace in Nepal Isabelle Duquesne, 2016. The four year long action research in far eastern Nepal blends peace education, social studies and local ethnic politics within national post conflict and state building efforts. The outcomes of these studies and programs suggest a recipe for peaceability that could be included in the country's educational curricula. A formula $PACE = B^3 \times i^2$ synthesizes how educationalists may transform teaching into laboratories to develop the future peace makers of their nation. Isabelle Duquesne is affiliated with the International Peace Research Association Foundation (IPRA) and the UNESCO Chair for Peace Studies, University of Innsbruck, Austria. Series: Studies on Education, Vol. 4. Subject: Sociology, Peace Studies, Tibetan Studies, Asian Studies.

Nepal in Transition D P Tripathi, 2012-04-10. Nepal's democracy struggle has been continuing for more than six decades. Since it could not sustain a stable democratic framework even after several attempts in the past, many scholars are stating that Nepal is in permanent transition. Once again, however, it has bagged enormous success in the field of political transformation in 2006 through a highly successful but peacefully organised movement with participation of people from all fields in large numbers. But it could not deconstruct the position of the transition as it has failed to institutionalise the recently gained achievements by making a new constitution even after five years. The only positive thing is that Nepali people along with various political parties are still trying hard to resolve vital conflicting issues through dialogue and come up with a new democratic constitution though they have already missed three deadlines.

Peter Murray Allen, 2005-01-01 The authors of this book link productivity change trade competitiveness networks of interaction and cooperation and income growth in developing Asian countries with the complex evolutionary processes of economic development and international trade. They take an innovative approach to simulating the complex micro dynamics of competitiveness in order to distinguish those trade related microeconomic dynamics and institutional reforms vital to leading countries out of institutional and poverty traps.

Foundations of Environmental Sustainability Larry Rockwood, Ronald Stewart, Thomas Dietz, 2008-06-04 This book reviews and analyzes the period roughly from the 1950s to the present when the environment became an issue as important as economic growth or war and peace to assess the current situation and begin planning for the challenges that lie ahead. Most people are aware of both the environmental destruction taking place around the world and of the specter of climate change. The devastation of New Orleans by hurricane Katrina illustrates the potential for disaster when climate change is combined with the mismanaged environmental policy. How did we get to this point? What has been done and what can be done to avoid future environmental disasters? Thirty-two contributing chapter authors among them one of the principal drafters of the National Environmental Policy Act, Chief of the African Environment Division and the World Bank Vice President of the Center for Conservation Innovation at the World Wildlife Fund, President of the Zoological Society of London, former President of the Ecological Society of America, use their unique authoritative perspective to review the evolution of environmental science and policy in the past half century. Each author describes the evolution of environmental science and policy in the past half century and considers the challenges of the future. Although the authors of this book come from various fields, they have followed paths that have generally converged on the concept of sustainability. This book attempts to define what sustainability is, how we can achieve it, and what the prospects for sustainability in the future are.
