Optical Fiber Sensors

OF experiences geometrical (size, shape) and optical (refractive index, mode conversion) changes applied external perturbations.

Fiber optic sensors can again be classified as Extrinsic sensors: Sensing takes place in a region outside of the fiber. The fiber essentially serves as a conduit for the to-and-fro transmission of light to the sensing region.

Intrinsic sensors: one or more of the physical properties of the fiber undergo a change and this change is measure of the external perturbation. See the figure above.

Physical sensors : Used to measure physical properties like temperature, stress, etc.

Chemical sensors : Used for pH measurement, gas analysis, spectroscopic studies, etc.

Bio-medical sensors : Used in bio-medical applications like measurement of blood flow , glucose content etc.

Fiber optic sensors are used commonly in the acquisition of real-time data on a variety of oil well parameters such as temperature, strain, pressure, sand detection, vibration, and acoustic signals, facilitating optimization of a reservoir through its lifecycle.
