

Directions: Read the paragraph to help you sequence the life cycle of a flowering plant.

First, a seed is planted in nutrient rich soil. Next, with the proper mix of soil, water and warmth from the sun, a seed will germinate. Then the seed will sprout through the soil, sometimes with the seed coat attached. Next, the sprout grows and its first leaves, which help to start photosynthesis, then the stem grows taller and true leaves emerge. Finally, the plant grows more and when it reaches adult stage the flowers will grow.
