Architecture

under Construction Stanley Greenberg,2010-04-15 Mies van der Rohe once commented Only skyscrapers under construction reveal their bold constructive thoughts and then the impression made by their soaring skeletal frames is overwhelming Never has this statement resonated more than in recent years when architectural design has undergone a radical transformation and when powerful computers allow architects and engineers to design and construct buildings that were impossible just a few years ago At the same time what lies underneath these surfaces is more mysterious than ever before In Architecture under Construction photographer Stanley Greenberg explores the anatomy and engineering of some of our most unusual new buildings helping us to understand our own fascination with what makes buildings stand up and what makes them fall down As designs for new constructions are revealed and the public watches closely as architects and engineers challenge each other with provocative new forms and equally audacious ideas Greenberg captures penetrating images that reveal the complex mystery and beauty found in the transitory moments before the skin of a building covers up the structures that hold it together Framed by a historical and critical essay by Joseph Rosa and including an afterword by the author the eighty captivating and thought provoking images collected here which focus on some of the most high profile design projects of the past decade including buildings designed by Norman Foster Frank Gehry Steven Holl Daniel Libeskind Thom Mayne and Renzo Piano among others are not to be missed by anyone with an eye for the almost invisible mechanisms that continue to define our relationship with the built world Your Dream Career For Dummies Carol L.
