Struggles for Equal Voice Yuya Kiuchi, 2012-11-01 Reveals how African Americans used cable television as a means of empowerment While previous scholarship on African Americans and the media has largely focused on issues such as stereotypes and program content Struggles for Equal Voice reveals how African Americans have utilized access to cable television production and viewership as a significant step toward achieving empowerment during the postCivil Rights and Black Power era In this pioneering study of two metropolitan districts Boston and Detroit Yuya Kiuchi paints a rich and fascinating historical account of African Americans working with municipal offices local politicians cable service providers and other interested parties to realize fair African American representation and media ownership Their success provides a useful lesson of community organizing image production education and grassroots political action that remains relevant and applicable even today Compendium of Papers Supplementing the Hearings on Telecommunications Research and Policy Development United States. Subcommittee on Communications, 1976 Federal Register, 1980 Cable Television Felix Chin, 1978-04-01 The rapid expansion of the cable television industry during the past 25 years has stimulated an almost equally rapid increase in the volume of cable television literature being produced each year Moreover the rate of growth of the number of publications is increasing of about 7000 articles studies and reports on cable TV published between 1950 and 1977 more than 5000 appeared in print after 1965 Needless to say the quality and subject areas of all this material vary widely as do the range of treatment and degree of detail that characterize different publications Because the array of information and sources available is so vast and because the usefulness of the published material is not uniformly high this bibliography while truly comprehensive in the range of topics covered aims at judicious selection rather than completeness I have attempted to provide the reader with all the best material ever published on any topic related to one of the most active areas of broadcasting cable television The first section of the bibliography lists general reference materials such as cable television periodicals including publishers names and addresses and cable television indexes to periodicals and legal digests The main body of the bibliography contains annotated citations arranged by topic under the following seven categories general in formation and history cable television regulation and policy cable technology and channel capacity cable television finance and economics uses of cable television cable television and education and community control and franchises New Directions in Telecommunications Policy:

 Information policy and economic policy Paula R. Newberg, 1989 Communications policy as been a fertile area for testing theories of regulation subsidy and incentives free speech political participation and the public interest The capacities of new communications technology have changed markedly since much of the governing legislation in the communications field was written Such a change is likely to continue and have considerable impact on specific communications sectors and in communications policy This two volume set of analyses undertakes a review of telecommunications policy in transition of actions taken and not taken of goals pursued or ignored of the adequacy of policy vehicles and their strengths and weaknesses The authors evaluate three categories of policy problems those of concept scope and judgment in communications policy those specific to media industries and forces affecting them and those concerning wider public policy
