

- Denver Development Screening Test (DDST). The DDST is used to screen children from two weeks through 6 years of age in four developmental domains; gross motor, fine motor adaptive, personal social and language skills. The test consists of 5 items but only those items are administered which are appropriate to the child's age.

Each item is scored pass or fail. A delay score is given to an item which is failed by the child that is passed by more than 90% of children in the normative age group. Scores are interpreted as "abnormal", "questionable", or "normal" in each sector. The main usefulness of the test is that it is easy to administer and score and does not require extensive training or experience in testing.

The DDST is most useful in identifying children with moderate to severe motor or cognitive deficit. However its usefulness is limited in detecting more subtle delays
