to health geographies Section one introduces ecological approaches with a focus on how natural and built environments affect human health For instance how have irrigation projects influenced the spread of water borne diseases How can modern healthcare settings such as hospitals affect the spread and evolution of pathogens Section two discusses social aspects of health and healthcare considering health as not merely a biological interaction between a pathogen and human host but as a process that is situated among social factors which ultimately drive who suffers from what and where disease occurs Section three then considers spatial techniques and approaches to exploring health giving special focus to the growing role of cartography and geographic information systems GIS in the study of health This clearly written text contains a range of pedagogical features including a wealth of global case studies discussion questions and suggestions for further reading at the end of each chapter a colour plate section and over eighty diagrams and figures The accompanying website also provides presentations exercises further resources and tables and figures This book is an essential introductory text for undergraduate students studying Geography Health and Social Studies

Indigenous Modernities Jyoti Hosagrahar, 2012-10-02. This book examines how a historic and so-called traditional city quietly evolved into one that was modern in its own terms in form, use, and meaning. Through a focused study of Delhi, the author challenges prevalent assumptions in architecture and urbanism to identify an interpretation of modernism that goes beyond conventional understanding. Part one reflects on transformations and discontinuities in built form and spatial culture and questions accepted notions of the static nature of what is normally referred to as traditional and non-Western architecture. Part two is a critical discussion of Delhi in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, redefining modernism in a way that separates the city's architecture and society from the objectified realm of the exotic, whilst acknowledging non-Western ideas of modernity. In the final part, the author considers indigenous modernities: the irregular, the uneven, and the unexpected in what uncritical observers might call a coherent traditional society and built environment.

Landscapes of Care Andrew Power, 2016-04-15. Given the increasing shift of care from state residential services to community-based support, this book examines the complex geographies of family caregiving for young adults with intellectual disabilities. It traces how family carers are directly and indirectly affected by a broad array of law and policy, including family policy, disability legislation, and health and community care restructuring policy. Each of these has material and institutional effects and is premised on the discourses, ideologies, and interactions in the state over time. Focusing on the welfare models of England, the US, and Ireland, this book compares the welfare ideologies in each country and examines how the specific historical, cultural, and political contexts give rise to different landscapes of care and disability. Further, the book explores the unique lifeworlds of family carers of young adults with intellectual disability within the broader landscape of care in which they are situated.
