Neurocognitive Profiling of Children with Specific or Comorbid Reading Disabilities Bartholomeus J.A. de Groot, 2015-03-03 This study concerns the question whether different reading related neurocognitive profiles can be observed for reading proficiency based groups of children who attend the upper levels of Dutch primary education Besides distinguishing between normal to good reading children and children with Reading Disabilities RD subgroups are discerned for two frequently reported comorbidities of RD i.e. Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder ADHD and Specific Language Impairment SLI The research of this PhD thesis is organized into two empirical sections on different branches of reading related neurocognitive research which are elaborated in five studies The first section focuses on the cognitive processes of phonemic awareness and rapid automatized naming and the first study specifically addresses the question as to how the severity of RD affects the relative importance of these processes

Additionally it is investigated how this works out for above average and excellent readers Involving the same processes the second and third study focus on the issue of comorbidity with SLI and ADHD The second section contains the fourth and fifth study which investigate the relatively novel link between word reading and two aspects of visual attention i e selective attention and orienting of attention In the general discussion the employed working model of reading is supplied with empirically based estimates of the neurocognitive effect sizes A main conclusion of the present study is that the addition of visual attention measurements to a phonological reading model provides an enhanced understanding of the cognitive basis of word reading and offers interesting new perspectives on differential diagnostic procedures and treatment planning

Osherson,2017-08-14 Originally published in 1976 this fourth and final volume in a series that met with critical acclaim is concerned with a certain kind of answer to the question What distinguishes the concepts that are a natural part of human languages from those that are merely expressible in language The kind of answers contemplated rely on formal properties of the logics that overlay the two sorts of concepts The author presents a substantive theory of natural concepts which helps to make concrete the methodological proposals In order to make the theory more manageable it is restricted to sentential modifiers expressed in English Although these proposals are substantive the methodology they exemplify may be of even more significance Some of the ideas in the author s approach derive from the work of Chomsky and several issues relevant to the growth of logical thinking are also treated with data that speak to questions raised in Volume 3 concerning qualitative change through development This final volume in the series will be essential reading for all concerned with both logical abilities in children their development and novel methodological approaches to research bearing on this and related issues The English Catalogue of Books ... Sampson Low,1908

School-based nutrition and physical activity interventions among children and adolescents Shooka Mohammadi, Hui Chin Koo, Ai Kah Ng, 2025-04-07. The increasing prevalence of obesity, sedentary lifestyle and unhealthy eating habits among children and adolescents is very concerning. The main risk factors that lead to childhood weight problems and obesity are an increase in meals eaten outside of the home, a rise in access to high-fat foods, high consumption of energy-packed foods, a sedentary lifestyle or skipping breakfast. This is concerning as obesity, inadequate physical activity (PA) and unhealthy diets are associated with chronic diseases. Therefore, promoting healthy eating and sufficient PA among children and adolescents has become a research priority and an important public health concern. The World Health Organization WHO considers schools a critical setting for improving public healthy eating and decreasing the risk of unhealthy weight gain in childhood In particular environmental interventions are recommended as they are more likely to lead to behavioural change Thus promoting adequate PA and a healthy diet among school aged children is essential

Social and Emotional Adjustment and Family Relations in Ethnic Minority Families Ronald D. Taylor,Margaret C. Wang,Margaret C Wang,2013-11-26 This collection of essays addresses issues related to the intersection of family relationships and several contexts for the social and emotional development of ethnic minority adolescents The papers are organized in sections under subtitles which reflect three contextual frames through which these issues may be examined The first section focuses on the relationship between economic factors and resources on the one hand and family relations as environments for development on the other. The next part focuses on family and peer networks and relations as contexts for the emotional and social development of adolescents. The last section takes neighborhood and school as contexts for and determinants of social and emotional adjustment in adolescence. Like much of the extant work and current thought concerning development in ethnic minority children and adolescents, the authors have highlighted the more stressful and negative aspects of these several contexts. There are a few explicit and several implicit references made to supportive and more positive contexts and manifestations of relationships which frame the developmental experiences of ethnic minority adolescents. These serve as a reminder that many ethnic minority adolescents do overcome the odds against success and grow into healthy and wholesome adults. However, in large measure, this book is a contribution to our understanding of the problematic circumstances under which a significant segment of the population exists, reminding us that life for ethnic minority adolescents is difficult. The fact that some of these young people manage to overcome the negative and stressful aspects of their experiences and defy the implicit prediction of failure to thrive is truly remarkable.
