Balancing Mountain Tourism, Cultural Heritage, and Environmental Stability Valeri, Marco, Singh, Amrik, Tyagi, Pankaj Kumar, Haghi, A.K., 2025-05-07 Mountain tourism has grown attracting adventure tourists vacationers and nature enthusiasts However this rise in popularity comes with complex challenges including cultural heritage preservation environmental integrity of mountain regions and tourism accommodations Balancing these three elements requires a delicate approach that considers the long term sustainability of the region While tourism brings economic benefits and promotes cultural exchange unchecked growth can lead to environmental degradation overcrowding and the erosion of local traditions This balance requires thoughtful planning collaboration and the implementation of sustainable practices Balancing Mountain Tourism Cultural Heritage and Environmental Stability explores the convergence of mountain tourism and environmental stability It examines how mountain destinations can thrive without sacrificing the qualities that make them unique and valuable This book covers topics such as ecology ecotourism and sustainability and is a useful resource for tourism professionals business owners ecologists academicians researchers and environmental scientists

Economic Change and Wellbeing Fabio D'Orlando, Francesco Ferrante, Albertina Oliverio, 2021-09-01 Technological progress and globalization have generated indisputable benefits but also relevant costs such as growing economic inequality economic fluctuations and financial instability Mainstream economics has usually considered these costs as temporary evenly distributed and more than compensated by the gains of the phases of economic expansion In this book which focuses mainly though not only on the labor market the authors contend that the major costs of the intensified process of creative destruction through which economic change proceeded have been ignored and the benefits overrated thus incorrectly estimating the net impact of economic growth on subjective wellbeing The book argues that the positive consequences of economic change and globalization may not compensate for the negatives because psychological losses are felt more strongly than gains due to loss aversion and the costs are unequally distributed those on low incomes disproportionately suffer more The result is an overall reduction in wellbeing and therefore appropriate policies are necessary to allow more people to enjoy the benefits of technological progress without suffering the costs The authors develop a comprehensive framework in which the socio psychological context and educational level of a community determine the most suitable policies both for the short and for the long run The book makes an invaluable contribution to the literature on economic growth and development labor economics the economics of wellbeing and applications of behavioral economics The readers that may be interested in this book are economists and other social scientists but also general readers since the analysis is maintained simple and accessible University teachers can use the book for courses on economic growth and development on labor economics on the economics of human capital on the economics of wellbeing and on applications of behavioral economics Global Environment Outlook - GEO-6: Healthy Planet, Healthy People UN

Berman,Zaur Rzakhanov,2000 Consider migration to a higher income region as a human capital investment in which parents bear migration costs and children share returns Migrants from a population with heterogeneous intergenerational discount rates will be self selected on intergenerational altruism Thus immigrants may be self selected on fertility Soviet Jews who migrate to Israel despite high migration costs have significantly more children than members of the same birth cohort who migrate later when costs are low We distinguish selection from treatment effects using a comparison group of women who migrate after childbearing age We also find that immigrants favor bequests more and spend more time with their grandchildren in the U S Health and Retirement Survey Selection on altruism can explain why historically immigrant absorbing countries like the U S have higher fertility than other countries at comparable income levels It provides an alternative explanation for Chiswick s classic earnings overtaking result Selection on altruism also implies that immigrant absorbing regions will grow faster or have higher per capita income or both

The Intergenerational (Im)Mobility of Immigrants Pascal Achard,2023 This paper studies the influence of pre migration social background on the longterm economic assimilation of immigrants I use unique French survey data to trace family histories over three generations before and after migration While many immigrants experience an occupational downgrading at migration their children benefit from the high socio economic status their family had in the origin country As a result characteristics of immigrant grandparents are more predictive of their grandchildren s educational attainment than are characteristics of native grandparents Gedanken von dem Ursprung u. Unterschied des adelichen, Bürger- u. Bauer- Standes in Teutschland ,1710 The Educational Consequences of Migration for Women and Men Sait Bayrakdar,Ayse Guveli,2019 Research commonly compares the educational outcomes of migrants and the second generation to their native peers in destination countries often finding the former groups lagging behind in education Their outcomes are rarely compared to their non migrant peers in the origin countries Using the dissimilation from origins perspective we ask whether Turkish origin men and women in Europe benefit from migration by comparing their educational outcomes to non migrants in Turkey At the same time we comparatively examine the intergenerational transmission of education to determine whether individuals are better off than their parents and grandparents Analysing the novel 2000 Families data we show that migrants and their descendants in Europe obtain higher education than their non migrant peers in Turkey While both men and women experience educational benefits from migration women s gains are higher Another salient finding is that Turkish origin parents in Europe are less able to pass on their socioeconomic resources to their children than their counterparts in Turkey Overall the findings corroborate the theory of the dissimilation of Turkish origin Europeans from their Turkish peers in educational attainment Generational Income Mobility in North America and Europe Miles Corak,2004-11-25 Labour markets in North America and Europe have changed tremendously in the face of increased globalisation and technical progress raising important challenges for policy makers concerned with equality of opportunity This book examines the influence of both changes in income inequality and of social policies on the degree to which economic advantage is passed on between parents and children in the rich countries Standard theoretical models of generational dynamics are extended to examine generational income and earnings mobility over time and across space Over twenty contributors from North America and Europe offer comparable estimates of the degree of mobility changes in mobility and the impact of government policy In so doing they strengthen the analytical tool kit used in the study of generational mobility and offer insights for research and directions in dealing with equality of opportunity and child poverty Persistence, Privilege, and

Intergenerational Mobility of Socio-economic Status in Comparative Perspective
 Anders Björklund, Markus Jäntti, 2000 Is America Becoming More Equal for Children? Yunju Nam, 2002

Intergenerational Social Mobility and Family Formation in the United States Michael D. King, 2020 In this dissertation I shift the focus of mainstream social stratification research away from economic and occupational outcomes to incorporate family formation patterns both as an outcome related to social mobility and as a contributor to social mobility Across three related papers I investigate the relationships between social mobility and family formation by focusing on the marriage experiences of first generation college students and the transmission of status and family structure between mothers and daughters In the first paper Chapter 2 I examine the marriage timing and assortative mating patterns of first and continuing generation college graduates to test the idea that college is a great equalizer for marriage outcomes I find few differences in marriage timing but large differences in who marries whom particularly for women Compared to women who have college educated parents women who are the first in their family to earn a bachelor s degree have a substantially lower likelihood of marrying a college graduate Similar differences do not exist for men These findings highlight the importance of examining non economic outcomes when studying social mobility and offer insight into how inequality may persist across generations especially for women despite apparent upward mobility In the second paper Chapter 3 I test one possible explanation for the large differences in assortative mating patterns observed in Chapter 2 Namely I explore whether accounting for where people attend college including a college s distance from home gender and socioeconomic composition and selectivity helps explain first generation women s lower likelihood of marrying a college graduate I find that each of the examined college characteristics is related to assortative mating outcomes but differences in attendance patterns between first and continuing generation women explain only a small amount of the differences observed in Chapter 2 These findings rule out one possible explanation for the observed differences and broaden our understanding of the role that colleges play in who marries whom I propose a number of additional avenues that future work should explore to better understand the remaining homogamy differences between first and continuing generation women In the final paper Chapter 4 I examine the relationships between the transmission of economic status and family structure between parents and children Specifically I examine how these interrelationships differ for those in poverty compared to those in affluence and explore whether rapid social change in the economic and demographic contexts of the United States has transformed the relationships over time I find that the intergenerational transmission of economic status and family structure are more intertwined than previous work has suggested though these relationships have been relatively stable over time Specifically I find evidence of both a double disadvantage experienced by those who grow up in poverty with a single mother and a double advantage for those who grow up in affluence with both biological parents These findings speak to the consequences of childhood conditions for adult outcomes and highlight another way that family processes play an important role in social stratification dynamics in the United States

Social and Economic Effects of Migration Tobias Heidland,2015 Family Background, Neighborhoods and Intergenerational Mobility Magne Mogstad,2021

This paper reviews the literature on intergenerational mobility While our review is centered around the large empirical literature on this topic we also give a brief discussion of some of the relevant theory We consider three strands of the empirical literature First we discuss how to measure intergenerational persistence in various socio economic outcomes We discuss both measurement challenges and some notable findings We then turn to quantifying the importance of family environment and genetic factors for children s outcomes We describe the pros and cons of various approaches as well as key findings The third strand is concerned with drawing causal inferences about how children's outcomes are affected by specific features of their family environment. We discuss a wide range of environmental features including the neighborhoods in which children grow up. We critically assess what conclusions one may and may not draw from certain celebrated studies of neighborhoods and intergenerational mobility.
