Coastal Lagoons I. Ethem Gonenc, John P. Wolflin, 2004-12-16 Coastal Lagoons Ecosystem Processes and Modeling for Sustainable Use and Development describes the concepts models and data needed to design and implement management programs for long term sustainability of coastal lagoons Based on a project conducted under the auspices of NATO CCMS the book provides information and methodologies essential for Ecosystem modelling of coastal lagoons for sustainable management I. E. Gönenç, 1997 Mediterranean Coastal Lagoons S. Cataudella, Donatella Crosetti, Fabio Massa, 2015 The Mediterranean region hosts around 400 coastal lagoons covering a surface of over 641 000 ha differing in both their typology and use Fisheries and various forms of aquaculture have been traditionally carried out in Mediterranean coastal lagoons since ancient times and are part of the cultural heritage of the region Traditional lagoon management linked to extensive aquaculture and fish harvesting has certainly contributed over time to preserve these peculiar ecosystems although much of the coastal lagoon areas have progressively disappeared due to land reclamation and other uses Recently coastal lagoons have become a relevant environmental concern land claiming pollution and the lack of management among other factors have strongly modified both the structure and functioning of these sensitive coastal ecosystems In particular the management of traditional aquaculture and capture fisheries activities has been identified as the main instrument to maintain lagoons ecological features and to prevent the degradation of their sensitive habitats both from an environmental and socioeconomic point of view To guarantee the sustainability of aquaculture and capture fisheries in lagoons proper management plans should be established so as to ensure the preservation of both biodiversity and local knowledge This should also be considered as a fundamental pillar for any programme aiming at the preservation and restoration of lagoons environment Publisher s description Mediterranean Coastal Lagoons Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2015-04-30 Traditional lagoon management linked to extensive aquaculture and fish harvesting has certainly contributed over time to preserve these peculiar ecosystems although much of the coastal lagoon areas have progressively disappeared due to land reclamation and other uses Recently coastal lagoons have become a relevant environmental concern land claiming pollution and the lack of management among other factors have strongly modified both the structure and functioning of these sensitive coastal ecosystems In particular the management of traditional aquaculture and capture fisheries activities has been identified as the main instrument to maintain lagoons ecological features and to prevent the degradation of their sensitive habitats both from an environmental and socioeconomic point of view Coastal Lagoon Processes Björn Kjerfve, 1994-01-01 This is a broad based review of the environmental oceanographic engineering and management aspects of coastal lagoons summarized in a convenient single volume A comprehensive literature review as well as references add to the utility of this volume creating an invaluable resource for academics scientists and laymen

Coastal Lagoon Eutrophication and ANaerobic Processes (C.L.E.AN.) Pierre Caumette, Jacques Castel, Rodney

Herbert, 2012-12-06 This multidisciplinary volume comprehensively reviews our current knowledge of the effects of urban industrial and agricultural pollution on the biology of shallow coastal marine lagoons. All the authors are internationally recognized authorities and have had many years of experience in their respective fields. The major strength of this volume is that it integrates several fields of research including biogeochemistry, marine microbiology, marine algology, and marine zoology. By adopting such a strategy, the reader is provided with a clear insight of the key processes involved in lagoon eutrophication and dystrophy and their impact on the different biological communities which live in such environments. This book will therefore provide an essential reference work for environmental biologists, ecologists, microbiologists, and those involved in the management and commercial exploitation of these economically important ecosystems. The Venice

Lagoon Ecosystem: Inputs and Interactions Between Land and Sea P. Lasserre, A. Marzollo, 1999. Coastal lagoons comprise 13% of the world's coastline and are found from tropical zones to the poles. They are enriched by oceanic and continental inputs and are among the world's most productive ecosystems. In many parts of the world, lagoons have long been closely interlinked with human societies, nowhere more so than in the Lagoon of Venice, where the mingling of human actions and ecological process has been so enduring, complete, complex, and profound. A one-of-a-kind scientific reference text, The Venice Lagoon Ecosystem: Inputs and Interactions Between Land and Sea covers research on the flooding and biological damage from pollution and dredging to Venice. The research integrated in situ and experimental studies and modeling to create a key multidisciplinary and synthesized contribution to understanding the complex interactions between man-induced perturbations and natural biological phenomena to better understand their reciprocal effects. Topics include the role of colloidal material in biogeochemical cycling of organic carbon and trace metals; the interactions between lagoon sediments and degradation of organic matter; the processes which regulate the coupling of nutrient dynamics, oxygen, and metal concentrations; and the effects of contaminants on macroalgae, molluscs, fish, and other biota. The volume includes bibliographic references and index. The scientific results found in this volume represent a distinctive contribution to the understanding of one of the world's most renowned coastal lagoon ecosystems, as well as to decisions on the future development of Venice and its lagoon. What's more, the lessons learned and approach taken in The Venice Lagoon Ecosystem: Inputs and Interactions Between Land and Sea are applicable to other coastal lagoon ecosystems around the world.
