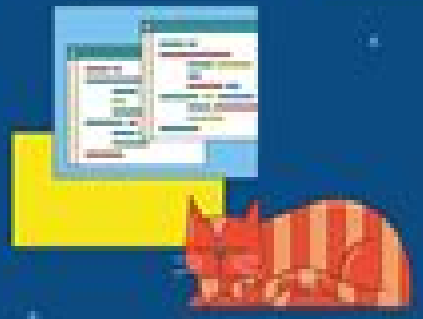
LEARN TO CODE WITH PYTHON

Discover the joy of coding with our beginner's guide to Python 3 on Raspberry Pi

by Phil King



In this mini course, we'll take you through the key principles of Python programming on Raspberry Pi.

For this guide, we'll be doing all our coding in the Thonny IDE (integrated development environment) in Raspberry Pi OS. An IDE is a program that is used to create other programs. You can create programs in any text editor, but using an IDE makes life easier (especially for newcomers).

From the Desktop applications menu, select Programming > Thonny. The Thonny IDE starts up in simple mode by default. Along the top are large icons including Load, Save, Run, and Stop.

Let's write some code

The main panel is where you will write your lines of Python code. At the bottom is the Shell panel where you'll see output and any error messages resulting from a running program.

Let's write some code!

For our first program, we'll print a message in the Shell. This is the window at the bottom of Thonny that displays the results (or output) of our program. It's a tradition to welcome a new programming language by getting it to say "Hello, World!"

In the main Thonny panel, on line 1, add the following Python code:

print("Hello, World!")

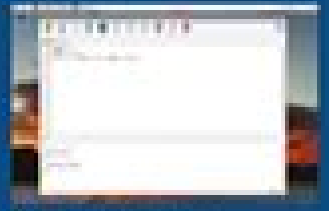
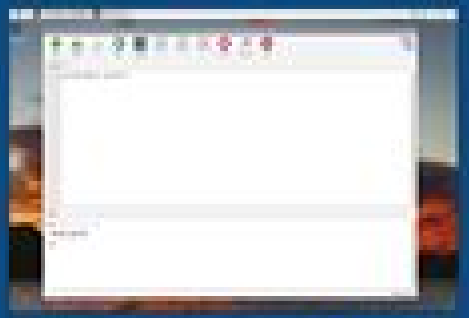
The double quotes are used to enclose a text message (known as a string). Click the Run icon and Thonny will run and print the message in the Shell. Try changing the text between the double quotes and rerunning it to see a different message.



▲ Variables and text strings can be stored in memory and then retrieved when needed.



You can save the program by clicking Save and entering hello_world.py in the Name field.

▲ Make sure to include the .py extension so Thonny knows it's a Python program.

Data types and maths operators

In our hello_world.py program, we printed a string of text. Other data types in Python include integers (whole numbers, such as 0, 1, and 2) and floating point numbers (decimals with a point, such as 3.14 or 10.125).

To make them, we omit the double quotes in our print statement. Click Run to start a new program and enter:

print(3.14)

WHY PYTHON?

There are lots of different programming languages around, and Python is by far the most popular for beginners. Here are five reasons why you should probably choose Python as your first language:

1. It's simple Python has a relatively simple and easy to learn syntax.
2. Python is versatile Python can be used for a wide range of applications, from web development to data analysis and artificial intelligence.
3. Large and active community Python has a large and active community of developers who contribute to its development. This community provides help and there are many resources available for learning and troubleshooting.
4. Open source Python is an open source language, which means that the source code is freely available for anyone to use, modify, and distribute.
5. Python in operations Code written in Python can be run on all major platforms including Raspberry Pi OS, other Linux distributions, Windows, and macOS.

Other languages do offer advantages, and we think Python is a great place to start.

Tip!

Name your programs

Python programs are typically named in all lower case with underscores (using multiple words), so:

- `game.py`
- `turtle_exercise`
- `number_guessing.py`

It's a good habit to make sure your file name reflects what the program does. Try to avoid spaces and generic names.
