Eugenius like Theodosius was a Christian but unlike Theodosius he was tolerant of pagans so this wind was seen as miraculous and the victory was attributed to God's favour. Nic Fields narrative sets the battle in the context of the political situation within the empire and the campaigns leading up to this pivotal showdown. The armies of both protagonists are described, the tactics and strategy of the time discussed. Drawing on his detailed knowledge of the sources, the latest research and his own visits to the battlefield and surrounding terrain, the author then recounts the battle itself. Importantly, he reveals the natural phenomenon behind the miracle that saved Theodosius. Finally, the author analyzes and assesses the aftermath and consequences of this significant clash, which included Eugenius' execution and the temporary reunification of the Eastern and Western Roman empires.

By Faith They Went Out Wilbert R. Shenk, 2000. In this collection of essays, Wilbert Shenk surveys and synthesizes aspects of the Mennonite experience in mission. He traces the mission impulse of early Anabaptism and documents the impact of subsequent historical developments from persecution and withdrawal through Pietist and evangelical revival to the globalization of the church in the twentieth century. Shenk identifies North American Mennonite Brethren in Christ ambivalence toward mission and reminds readers that mission has the potential to provide focus and relevance to a church struggling for identity and meaning. In the book's final essay, Shenk lays a foundation for a Mennonite theology of mission that is both biblical and consonant with Anabaptist tradition.

Fessenden & Co.'s Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge John Newton Brown, 1836

Religion and the City in India Supriya Chaudhuri, 2021-08-19. This book offers fresh theoretical, methodological, and empirical analyses of the relation between religion and the city in the South Asian context. Uniting the historical with the contemporary by looking at the medieval and early modern links between religious faith and urban settlement, the book brings together a series of focused studies of the mixed and multiple practices and spatial negotiations of religion in the South Asian city. It looks at the various ways in which contemporary religious practice affects urban everyday life, commerce, craft, infrastructure, cultural forms, art, music, and architecture. Chapters draw upon original empirical study and research to analyze the foundational structural material and cultural connections between religious practice and urban formations or flows. The book argues that Indian cities are not postsecular in the sense that the term is currently used in the modern West, but that there has been rather a deep, even foundational link between religion and urbanism, producing different versions of urban modernity. Questions of caste, gender, community, intersectional entanglements, physical proximity, private or public ritual, processions, and prayer, economic and political factors, material objects, and changes in the built environment are all taken into consideration, and the book offers an interdisciplinary analysis of different historical periods, different cities, and different types of religious practice. Filling a gap in the literature by discussing a diversity of settings and faiths, the book will be of interest to scholars of South Asian history, sociology, literary analysis, urban studies, and cultural studies.
