

A black and white photograph capturing three children in motion on a beach. The children are silhouetted against the bright, foamy waves of the ocean. They are running from the foreground towards the water. The child on the left is in a full running stride. The child in the middle is slightly behind and to the left. The child on the right is in the foreground, also running, with their right arm extended forward. The overall mood is one of freedom and joy.
