

Who are “we”? Examining relational ethos in British Columbia, Canada’s COVID-19 public health communication

Philippa Spoel, Alexandra Millar, Naomi Lacelle and Aarani Mathialagan

Abstract

This paper investigates the multiple meanings and functions of the pronoun “we” in COVID-19 public updates by British Columbia’s acclaimed Provincial Health Officer Dr. Bonnie Henry in 2020. Our rhetorical case study shows how “we” contributes to Henry’s relational ethos by attempting to foster a communal identity with her implied audience while also distinguishing public health expertise, actions, and authority from citizens’ knowledge and actions. Ambiguous uses of “we” blur the line between the knowledge and responsibilities of “we” in public health and “we” as citizens. Overall, our rhetorical analysis demonstrates the significant but ambivalent role this pronoun can play in building relations of social trust among citizens, experts, and institutions within public health and science communication contexts and it suggests the importance of judicious pronoun usage when communicators strive to foster these relations.

The COVID-19 pandemic thrust public health officials into the spotlight, as they were called on to communicate regularly and repeatedly about the status, prevention, and treatment of the virus. Their role as high-profile science communicators as well as public health leaders thus became unusually pronounced. COVID-19 communication by public health officials warrants careful analysis because of its importance in communicating rapidly-changing scientific information and public health guidelines to citizens in clear and trustworthy ways. Here, we contribute to this research through a rhetorical case study of public health updates delivered by Dr. Bonnie Henry, British Columbia, Canada’s acclaimed Provincial Health Officer, during the first ten months of the pandemic in BC. Similarly to the situations addressed by numerous public health officials around the world, Henry’s COVID-19 updates addressed a complex set of exigencies: the

Ethos And Senior Leader Communication Examining Responses To A Policy Change Memo:

Ethos and Senior Leader Communication Sarah E. Martin, 2010 Senior leaders use persuasive messages to achieve a variety of outcomes in the organizations they lead Previous studies have examined discourse in senior leader messages to draw conclusions about leader communication but little has been done to explicate the nature of the assumptions and judgments that emerge in both the intent and reception of these messages This paper examines the relationship between senior leader intent and audience reception of a policy change memo in a large government agency Using a think aloud protocol 24 qualitative interviews were conducted one with the director and 23 with employees from field level through senior management Rhetorical and thematic analysis of interview transcripts indicated that Aristotle's three components of ethos good sense good character and goodwill emerged as primary themes in both the director's intent behind the memo and in the way that it was received by participants in the study Findings illustrate the manner in which ethos can operate in senior leader messages This study concludes that ethos is an important rhetorical appeal in leadership messages and is an important basis of reader judgments Implications for the relevance of ethos to business communication are discussed

European Military Culture and Security Governance Tamir Libel, 2016-03-17 This book offers the first systematic comparative analysis of military education and training in Europe within the context of the post Cold War security environment Based on an analysis of military education institutions in the UK Germany Finland Romania and the Baltic States this book demonstrates that the convergence of European military cultures since the end of the Cold War is linked to changes in military education The process of convergence originates at least in part from the full or partial adoption of a new concept by post commissioning professional military education institutions the National Defence University Officers are now educated alongside civilians and public servants wherein they enjoy a socialization experience that is markedly different from that of previous generations of European officers and is increasingly similar across national borders In addition this book argues that with the control over the curricula and graduation criteria increasingly set by civilian higher education authorities the European armed forces while continuing to exist and hold significant although declining capabilities stand to lose their status as a profession in the traditional sense This book will be of much interest to students of military European security policy European politics and IR in general
