Protestant missionary children's lives, c.1870-1950 Hugh Morrison, 2024-03-05 Protestant missionary children were uniquely empire citizens through their experiences of living in empire and in religiously formed contexts This book examines their lives through the related lenses of parental institutional and child narratives To do so it draws on histories of childhood and of emotions using a range of sources including oral history. It argues that missionary children were doubly shaped by parents' concerns and institutional policy responses. At the same time, children saw their own lives as both ordinary and complicated. Literary representations boosted adult narratives. Empire provided a complex space in which these children navigated their way between the expectations of two if not three different cultures. The focus is on a range of settings and on the early twentieth century. Therefore, the book offers a complex and comparative picture of missionary children's lives.
