

Comparison Of two Different Movies

Films, television, and other forms of media are often primarily seen as entertainment with little relevancy to real life situations, but I have always found these pieces of media to be a reflection and analysis of important issues. The story of a working-class protagonist entering an elite college prep school on a scholarship, and dealing with the attitudes of the upper-class students, is common in Hollywood films. School Ties and Finding Forrester both tell these stories from the perspective of the working-class student who has earned their spot through hard work and devotion to academic excellence. David Greene and Jamal Wallace are both sympathetic characters who face opposition in their prep school environments. They are also both minority characters in a primarily white upper-class Christian culture: David is Jewish, and Jamal is black. David and Jamal represent the ideal heroes of a meritocracy. Their positions are earned through their own individual abilities, not through being born into wealth and privilege. They both have to overcome adversity, in the form of antagonists who disrespect them due to their status as working-class minorities. These stories reinforce a narrative that claims anyone can enter the upper class through hard work and dedication, and thus favors meritocracy. The podcast Three Miles, however, presents a counter-narrative that challenges the Hollywood portrayal of the working-class student in the elite school and examines the reality these types of students face. Melanie and Jonathan, who are both teenagers from the Bronx who participate in an exchange program that allows students from a poor public school to tour an elite private school located just three miles away. Both teens face challenges when they are confronted with the stark differences between their lives and the lives of the private school students.
