Bringing Law Home Katherine Eva Maich, 2025-08-05 The personal nature of domestic labor and its location in the privacy of the employer's home means that domestic workers have long struggled for equitable and consistent labor rights The dominant discourse regards the home as separate from work so envisioning what its legal regulation would look like is remarkably challenging In Bringing Law Home Katherine Eva Maich offers a uniquely comparative and historical study of labor struggles for domestic workers in New York City and Lima Peru She argues that if the home is to be a place of work then it must also be captured in the legal infrastructures that regulate work Yet even progressive labor laws for domestic workers in each city are stifled by historically entrenched patterns of gendered racialization and labor informality Peruvian law extends to household workers only half of the labor protections afforded to other occupations In New York City the law grants negligible protections and deliberately eschews language around immigration Maich finds that coloniality is deeply embedded in contemporary relations of service revealing important distinctions in how we understand power domination and inequality in the home and the workplace
