Open Access Literature in Libraries Karen Brunsting, Caitlin Harrington, Rachel E. Scott, 2022-11-30 Open Access

has evolved into the most complex challenge of the scholarly publishing landscape and something libraries grapple with on a regular basis. But although librarians hold increasingly positive perceptions about OA including its richness of unique content and immediacy of access many lack the understanding, training, documentation and knowledge of best practices that would allow them to engage with it confidently. This book helps to fill that gap using a holistic approach that walks readers through the steps of integrating OA resources into library collections and supporting OA initiatives irrespective of budget, institution type, collection size and staffing. Explaining definitions and models of OA types of OA support the tensions between free to read and libre OA and other key topics from this book readers will learn the origins and growth of OA how to define it and some of the ways in which librarians have made connections to OA where OA diverges from the historic role of library collection development policies and ways to bring OA into alignment with an institution's collection development principles and practices, real world examples of how libraries have supported or integrated OA into their collections including strategies for selecting and activating OA titles and collections for inclusion, offering open educational resources (OER) to students, samples of collection management workflows and ideas for aligning collections with institutional repositories or other Green OA initiatives, guidance on financially supporting OA content initiatives and platforms, how OA publishing does and does not harmonize with diversity, equity and inclusion initiatives and tips for using ongoing assessment and evaluation to continuously support the library's path to an open future.

Robots in Academic Libraries: Advancements in Library Automation Iglesias, Edward, 2013-04-30. In recent years automation has played a vital role in library systems that handle tasks of acquisition, cataloging, serials and circulation.
