Collective Identities in Action Klaus Eder, 2017 This title was first published in 2003 Thirty years of sociological and political science enquiry failed to predict the wave of ethnic conflict that swept through Europe in the 1990s and the continuing ethnic tensions in the developing world Since then researchers have been unable to construct coherent explanations of why groups that had previously shared political and economic systems could suddenly find themselves caught in spirals of separatism and group violence This book analyzes the last decades of political science and sociological enquiry into ethnicity and nationalist politics and lays down a new theoretical basis for understanding the field The authors accept the challenge of methodological individualism in social science but criticize existing rational choice paradigms arguing that we will only understand ethnic conflict through an enquiry into the links between micro and macro phenomena and in particular by focusing on the conditions under which actors construct and negotiate social identities including nations and ethnicities Informed by a comparative overview of all recent ethnic conflicts the book is built on an unparalleled grasp of the main theoretical accounts of nationalism and ethnicity and a definitive critique of the essentialism and constructivism that have dogged understanding of ethnic conflict Provided by publisher

Indigenous Identity Formation in Chilean Education Andrew Webb,2021-09-09 This book offers rich sociological analysis of the ways in which educational institutions influence indigenous identity formation in Chile In doing so Webb explores the mechanisms of new racism in schooling and demonstrates how continued forms of exclusion impact minority groups By drawing on qualitative research conducted with Mapuche youth in schools in rural and urban settings and in private state subsidised and public schools this volume provides a comprehensive exploration of how national belonging and indigeneity are articulated and experienced in institutional contexts Close analysis of student and teacher narratives illustrates the reproduction of historically constructed ethnic and racial criteria and demonstrates how these norms persist in schools despite apparently progressive attitudes toward racism and colonial education in Chile This critical perspective highlights the continued prevalence of implicit racism whereby schooling produces culturally subjective and exclusionary norms and values By foregrounding contemporary issues of indigenous identity and education in Chile this book adds important scholarship to the field The text will be of interest to researchers academics and scholars in the fields of indigenous education sociology of education and international and comparative education
