

The background of the entire page is a photograph of a fog collection system in operation. Two tall, slender metal towers are positioned on a grassy hillside. A large, dark, rectangular mesh net is stretched between the tops of these towers, held taut by ropes. Two workers are visible on ladders attached to the towers, working on the net. Below the towers, several other people are standing on the ground, observing the process. The sky is overcast and grey, suggesting a foggy or cloudy day. The overall scene depicts a practical application of fog collection technology in a natural environment.

Qadir,Vladimir Smakhtin,Sasha Koo-Oshima,Edeltraud Guenther,2022-05-26 The world is faced with a growing number of complex and interconnected challenges Water is among the top 5 global risks in terms of impacts which would be far reaching beyond socio economic challenges impacting livelihoods and wellbeing of the people As freshwater resources and population densities are unevenly distributed across the world some regions and countries are already water scarce Water scarcity is expected to intensify in regions like the Middle East and North Africa MENA which has 6% of the global population but only 1% of the world s freshwater resources Climate change adds to this complexity as it is leading to rainfall uncertainty and extended droughts periods mostly in arid areas Increasing water scarcity is now recognized as a major cause of conflict social unrest and migration and at the same time water is increasingly considered as an instrument for international cooperation to achieve sustainable development Tapping and assessing sustainably every available option in water scarce areas is needed as pressure continues to build on limited water resources The stark fact is that conventional water provisioning approaches relying on snowfall rainfall and river runoff are not enough to meet growing freshwater demand in water scarce areas Water scarce countries need a radical re think of water resource planning and management that includes the creative exploitation of a growing set of viable but unconventional water resources for food production livelihoods ecosystems climate change adaption and sustainable development Unconventional water resources are generated
