Fundamentals of Cost Management

Solutions to Review Questions

10-1.

Activity-based costing provides management with detailed costing information about products and services. Activity-based management focuses on the use of activity-based costing information to make decisions. Activity-based management is based on activity analysis and finding ways to be more efficient with activities within the organization.

10-2.

Activity-based management can be implemented without an activity-based costing system. However, since the focus of activity-based management is on those activities that cause the most costs, activity-based costing provides data useful to the implementation of activity-based management.

10-3.

Value-added activities add value to the product or service whereas nonvalue-added activities do not add value. By identifying activities that do not add value, management is able to focus on eliminating or reducing nonvalue-added activities. By identifying value-added activities, management knows which activities to retain and make more efficient.

Common nonvalue-added activities include storing materials, reworking defective units, correcting purchase orders that are incorrect, and moving materials and products.

10-4.

Customers affect costs by the way they interact with the company and place demands on company activities. Common examples are ordering behavior and sales support. Suppliers affect costs by the way they interact with the company and place demands on the company activities. Common examples are deliveries that are late or products that have to be inspected before use or sale.

10-5.

The cost of customers is the same as any cost allocation problem in that it requires costs from cost pools to be allocated to the cost objects, in this case customers. It differs in that it focuses on customers and not products.
