Animal Nutrition

Lecture Outline

Overview: The Need to Feed

- All animals eat other organisms—dead or alive, whole or by the piece (including parasites).
- Animal nutrition includes the ingestion, breakdown, and absorption of food.
- In general, animals fit into one of three dietary categories.
  1. Herbivores, such as cattle, parrotfish, and termites, eat mainly plants or algae.
  2. Carnivores, such as sharks, hawks, and spiders, eat other animals.
  3. Omnivores, such as cockroaches, bears, and humans, consume animal and plant or algal matter.
- The terms herbivore, carnivore, and omnivore represent the kinds of food that an animal usually eats, but most animals are opportunistic, occasionally eating foods that are outside their main dietary category.
  - For example, cattle and deer, which are herbivores, occasionally eat small animals or bird eggs.
  - All animals consume bacteria along with other types of food.
- To survive and reproduce, animals must balance their consumption, storage, and use of food.

Concept 41.1 An animal's diet must supply chemical energy, organic molecules, and essential nutrients.

- An animal's diet provides chemical energy that can be converted to ATP to power living processes.
- In addition to fuel for ATP production, an animal's diet must supply the raw materials needed for biosynthesis.
  - Animals require a source of organic carbon and a source of organic nitrogen in order to construct their own organic molecules.
- Materials that an animal's cells require but cannot synthesize are called essential nutrients.
  - Essential nutrients, which must be obtained from an animal's diet, include both minerals and preassembled organic molecules.
