Esience Manual Anatomy:

Workflows for e-Science Ian J. Taylor, Ewa Deelman, Dennis B. Gannon, Matthew Shields, 2007-12-31 This collection of articles on Workflows for e-Science is very timely and important. Increasingly to attack the next generation of scientific problems multidisciplinary and distributed teams of scientists need to collaborate to make progress on these new Grand Challenges. Scientists now need to access and exploit computational resources and databases that are geographically distributed through the use of high speed networks. Virtual Organizations or VOs must be established that span multiple administrative domains and/or institutions and which can provide appropriate authentication and authorization services and access controls to collaborating members. Some of these VOs may only have a fleeting existence but the lifetime of others may run into many years. The Grid community is attempting to develop both standards and middleware to enable both scientists and industry to build such VOs routinely and robustly. This of course has been the goal of research in distributed computing for many years but now these technologies come with a new twist: service orientation. By specifying resources in terms of a service description rather than allowing direct access to the resources the IT industry believes that such an approach results in the construction of more robust distributed systems. The industry has therefore united around web services as the standard technology to implement such service-oriented architectures and to ensure interoperability between different vendor systems.

The Medical Library Association Guide to Data Management for Librarians Lisa Federer, 2016-09-15 Technological advances and the rise of collaborative interdisciplinary approaches have changed the practice of research. The 21st century researcher not only faces the challenge of managing increasingly complex datasets but also new data sharing requirements from funders and journals. Success in today's research enterprise requires an understanding of how to work effectively with data yet most researchers have never had any formal training in data management. Libraries have begun developing services and programs to help researchers meet the demands of the data-driven research enterprise, giving librarians exciting new opportunities to use their expertise and skills. The Medical Library Association Guide to Data Management for Librarians highlights the many ways that librarians are addressing researchers' changing needs at a variety of institutions including academic, hospital and government libraries. Each chapter ends with pearls of wisdom: a bulleted list of 5-10 takeaway messages from the chapter that will help readers quickly put the ideas from
