Women and Gender in Postwar Europe Joanna Regulski, Bonnie G. Smith, 2012-03-12 Women and Gender in Postwar Europe charts the experiences of women across Europe from 1945 to the present day Europe at the end of World War II was a sorry testimony to the human condition awash in corpses the infrastructure devastated food and fuel in such short supply From Soviet Union to the United Kingdom and Ireland the vast majority of citizens on whom survival depended in the postwar years were women This book charts the involvement of women in postwar reconstruction through the Cold War and post Cold War years with chapters on the economic social and political dynamism that characterized Europe from the 1950s onwards and goes on to look at the woman's place in a rebuilt Europe that was both more prosperous and as tension filled as before The chapters both look at broad trends across both eastern and western Europe such as the horrific aftermath of World War II but also present individual case studies that illustrate those broad trends in the historical development of women's lives and gender roles The case studies show difference and diversity across Europe whilst also setting the experience of women in a particular country within the broader historical issues and trends in such topics as work professionalization sexuality consumerism migration and activism The introduction and conclusion provide an overview that integrates the chapters into the more general history of this important period This will be an essential resource for students of women and gender studies and for post 1945 courses

Learning to Labour in Post-Soviet Russia Charles Walker, 2010-11-12 This book explores the changing nature of growing up working class in post-Soviet Russia, a country dislocated by the experience of neo-liberal economic reform. Based on extensive ethnographic research in a provincial Russian region, it follows the experiences of vocational education graduates whose colleges continue to channel them into the ailing industrial and agricultural sectors. Rather than settling for transitions into poor work, the book shows how these young men and women develop a range of strategies aimed at overcoming the poverty of opportunity available to them in traditional enterprises, pursuing instead emerging opportunities in higher education jobs in the new service sector and the prospect of migration. Drawing on a range of theoretical perspectives, Charles Walker analyses these strategies and their significance for wider processes of social change and social stratification in post-Soviet Russia.

Work, Employment and Transition Al Rainnie, Adrian Smith, Adam Swain, 2005-07-28 Since the late 1980s, the experiences of work and employment in the former communist world have been profoundly transformed. Work, Employment and Transition brings together a series of essays by leading international scholars which highlights the varied and complex forms that work and employment restructuring are taking in the post-Soviet world and makes important theoretical contributions to our understanding of these transformations.

Making the New Post-Soviet Person Jarrett Zigon, 2010-03-25 The post-Soviet years have widely been interpreted as a period of intense moral questioning, debate and struggle. Despite this claim, few studies have revealed how this moral experience has been lived and articulated by Russians themselves. This book provides an intimate portrait of how five Muscovites have experienced the post-Soviet years as a period of intense refashioning of their moral personhood and how this process can only be understood at the intersection of their unique personal experiences, a shared Russian/Soviet history and increasingly influential global discourses and practices. The result is a new approach to understanding everyday moral experience and the processes by which new moral persons are cultivated.
