Gender and the Great War Susan R. Grayzel, Tammy M. Proctor, 2017-05-30 The centenary of the First World War in 2014 offers an opportunity to reflect upon the role of gender history in shaping our understanding of this pivotal international event From the moment of its outbreak the gendered experiences of the war have been seen by contemporary observers and postwar commentators and scholars as being especially significant for shaping how the war can and must be understood The negotiating of ideas about gender by women and men across vast reaches of the globe characterizes this modern instrumental conflict Over the past twenty five years as the scholarship on gender and this war has grown there has never been a forum such as the one presented here that placed so many of the varying threads of this complex historiography into conversation with one another in a manner that is at once accessible and provocative Given the vast literature on the war itself scholarship on gender and various themes and topics provides students as well as scholars with a chance to think not only about the subject of the war but also the methodological implications of how historians have approached it While many studies have addressed the national or transnational narrative of women in the war none address both femininity and masculinity and the experiences of both women and men across the same geographic scope as the studies presented in this volume

Bombardment, Public Safety and Resilience in English Coastal Communities during the First World War Michael Reeve, 2022-01-01 This book makes the case for a unique coastal urban experience of war on the home front during the First World War focusing on case studies from the north east of England The use of case studies from this region problematises an often assumed national or generalised experience of civilian life during the war by shifting the frame of analysis away from the metropolis This book begins with chapters related to wartime resilience including analysis of pre war fear of invasion and bombardment and government policy on public safety It then moves on to a discussion of power relations and the local implementation of policy related to bombardment including policing Finally the book explores the coastal urban environment focusing on depictions of war damage in popular culture and the wartime and post war commemoration of civilian bombardment This work provides a multi faceted perspective on civilian resilience while responding to a recent call for new histories of the coastal zone
