CARBON DIOXIDE FIRE PROTECTION —

Protection of Spaces Beneath Raised Floors

The use of raised floors in computer rooms and similar facilities has been the practice for many years. These spaces have traditionally been used as areas in which to run cables point to point, interconnecting power and control. They are also often the main means of distributing cooling air to the equipment. When listed or approved cables are used, the fire hazard from these is very small. However, fires at connecting points have been reported. These areas can also become the repository for extraneous material, and fires from this source have also been reported.

By its very nature, a fire beneath a raised floor can be especially serious as the products of combustion can reach the equipment quickly through their close proximity and by being carried by the air which flows through the sub-floor to the equipment. There is no other place in a computer room where a fire can expose more key equipment more quickly. So even though the prospect of a fire is remote, many feel they cannot accept the risk of not protecting this space.

When FM-200 total flooding is used, the protection of this space is best accomplished by flooding it, along with the room above. But when sprinklers are used in the room, good sprinkler coverage cannot be provided in the raised floor space and gaseous agent protection is needed, as, again, few want to run the risks of partial protection.

Protecting just the space beneath a raised floor with a gaseous system is not easy. It was particularly difficult with Halon 1301 due to the rapid discharge and relatively low concentration used. Loss of agent became more acute.

This is not so with carbon dioxide. The 50% design concentration used is at least twice that required to extinguish open burning, so the time required to ensure complete extinguishment is reduced. Remember, the higher the concentration, the shorter the soaking period needs to be.
