

Pre-Lab Assignment – Lab 11 – Chemical Reactions

Answer: Classification Key:

1. Match (draw a line) the following chemical reactions to their reaction types:

Combustion

Single-Displacement

Acid-Base

Double-Displacement

Decomposition

2. Briefly describe the actual process in each of the following reaction types:

Combustion: A combustion reaction is a reaction in which a hydrocarbon (or other organic compound) reacts with molecular oxygen, usually with heat and light being generated as products. Combustion reactions with other elements:

Decomposition: These are the opposite of decomposition reactions. Thermolysis:

Thermolysis is the first two heat induced decomposition. Electrolysis: Electrolysis is the process of decomposing through electricity. Photolysis: Photolysis is the first two light induced decomposition.

Single-Displacement: A single displacement reaction occurs when one element replaces another in a compound. This type of reaction has the general equation: $\text{A} + \text{BC} \rightarrow \text{B} + \text{AC}$. In this equation, A represents a metal element, element B is a metal, and C represents a compound.

Double-Displacement: In a double displacement reaction, two compounds react, often forming two different compounds. Like single displacement reactions, double displacement reactions always produce water and sometimes other ionic compounds. Double displacement reactions often produce precipitates when two soluble compounds are present.

Acid-Base: Acid-base reactions result in both acid and water. This is an example of a neutralization reaction. Other acid-base reactions with alcohols, aldehydes, ketones, and amines are also important acid-base reactions.
