Schwartz, 2018-10-09 The Handbook of Research Methods in Human Memory presents a collection of chapters on methodology used by researchers in investigating human memory Understanding the basic cognitive function of human memory is critical in a wide variety of fields such as clinical psychology developmental psychology education neuroscience and gerontology and studying memory has become particularly urgent in recent years due to the prominence of a number of neurodegenerative diseases such as Alzheimer's. However, choosing the most appropriate method of research is a daunting task for most scholars. This book explores the methods that are currently available in various areas of human memory research and serves as a reference manual to help guide readers' own research. Each chapter is written by prominent researchers and features cutting-edge research on human memory and cognition with topics ranging from basic memory processes to cognitive neuroscience to further applications. The focus here is not on the what but the how: how research is best conducted on human memory.

Memory Alan Baddeley, Michael W. Eysenck, Michael C. Anderson, 2025-05-13. This key textbook, now in its fourth edition, provides students with the most comprehensive introduction to the study of human memory and its applications in the field. Written by three leading experts, it delivers an authoritative and accessible overview of key topic areas. Each chapter combines breadth of content coverage with a wealth of relevant practical examples, while the engaging writing style invites the reader to share the authors' fascination with the exploration of memory through their individual areas of expertise. Across the text, the scientific theory is connected to a range of real-world questions and everyday human experiences. This new edition has been fully revised and updated to address the latest research theories and applications, including a new second chapter that acts as a one-stop overview of the full range of neuroscience methods for studying memory. Includes new or expanded coverage of collective memory, spatial memory, explicit and implicit memory, episodic and autobiographical memory, and the functional role of memory in more complex tasks. It also features a greater emphasis on memory in the real world, practical applications, and the impact of memory research on everyday life. Has been updated for more inclusive language and representation of people and research across race, ethnicity, sexuality, gender identity, and neurodiversity. This edition of Memory is an essential resource for those embarking on their studies in this important field or with an interest in the topic.

Language and Emotion. Volume 3 Gesine Lenore Schiewer, Jeanette Altarriba, Bee Chin Ng, 2023-05-08. The Handbook consists of four major sections. Each section is introduced by a main article: Theories of Emotion, General Aspects, Perspectives in Communication Theory, Semiotics and Linguistics, Perspectives on Language and Emotion in Cultural Studies, Interdisciplinary and Applied Perspectives. The first section presents interdisciplinary emotion theories relevant for the field of language and communication research, including the history of emotion research. The second section focuses on the full range of emotion-related aspects in linguistics, semiotics, and communication theories. The next section focuses on cultural studies and language and emotion, emotions in arts and literature, as well as research on emotion in literary studies and media and emotion. The final section covers different domains, social practices and applications, such as society, policy, diplomacy, economics, and business, communication, religion, and emotional language, the domain of affective computing in human-machine interaction, and language and emotion research for language education. Overall, this Handbook represents a comprehensive overview in a rich, diverse compendium never before published in this particular domain.

Current perspectives on the mechanisms of auditory hallucinations in clinical and non-clinical populations Johanna C. Badcock, Frank Larøi, Paul Allen, Kelly M. Diederer, 2014-03-07

There has been a recent surge of interest in auditory hallucinations AH in schizophrenia compared to those experienced by non clinical i.e healthy individuals This interest stems in no small part from a keen awareness of the fact that progress in developing more effective treatments for AH in psychosis has been seriously hampered by our limited understanding of the cognitive and biological mechanisms involved The prevailing notion that AH in clinical and non clinical populations share the same features and underlying mechanisms the continuum hypothesis has been seriously challenged by a growing list of differences as well as similarities between these groups At the phenomenological level this is exemplified in the highly negative content of AH in patients and the markedly earlier age of onset of AH in non patients Similarly several recent studies point to significant differences in cognition language lateralization and possibly dopamine function between these groups These findings have important implications for the design of future studies and raise considerable doubt about the adequacy of modelling the functional mechanisms of clinical AH on the basis of non clinical populations In short the time seems ripe to re evaluate the continuum hypothesis and provide a forum to present alternative perspectives on the functional pathways leading to AH in clinical and non clinical groups Such a forum is also timely in view of the renewed interest in AH in other non schizophrenic clinical groups again examining similarities and differences between such groups Preliminary studies for instance have shown that AH in certain clinical populations e.g bipolar disorder borderline personality disorder dissociative disorder share similar phenomenological features with AH in schizophrenia However the implications of such findings are not fully understood and studies have not adequately examined potential differences between AH in these groups The goal of this Frontiers Research Topic therefore is take the opportunity to bring together research exploring differences and similarities in mechanisms of AH in clinical and non clinical groups and to stimulate the development of new explanatory models which explicitly link the phenomenological characteristics of AH with underlying mechanisms

Story in Children's Lives: Contributions of the Narrative Mode to Early Childhood Development, Literacy, and Learning Kelli Jo Kerry-Moran, Juli-Anna Aerila, 2019-09-27 This book is based on the power of stories to support children in all areas of their lives It examines the role narratives can play in encouraging growth in contexts and domains such as personal and family identity creative movement memory and self concept social relationships or developing a sense of humor Each chapter describes innovative and research based applications of narratives such as movement stories visual narratives to develop historical thinking multimodal storytelling bibliotherapy mathematics stories family stories and social narratives The chapters elaborate on the strength of narratives in supporting the whole child in diverse contexts from young children on the autism spectrum improving their social skills at school to four and five year olds developing historical thinking to children who are refugees or asylum seekers dealing with uncertainty and loss Written by accomplished teachers researchers specialists teaching artists and teacher educators from several countries and backgrounds the book fills a gap in the literature on narratives this work delves into the topic of narratives in young children's lives with a breadth of topics and depth of study not found elsewhere Collectively the insights of the contributors build a
