Congress. House. Committee on Appropriations. Subcommittee on Department of Transportation and Related Agencies Appropriations,1999 Applied Human Factors in Aviation Maintenance Manoj S. Patankar,James C. Taylor,2017-07-05 Considering the global awareness of human performance issues affecting maintenance personnel there is enough evidence in the US ASRS reports to establish that systemic problems such as impractical maintenance procedures inadequate training and the safety versus profit challenge continue to contribute toward latent failures Manoj S Patankar and James C Taylor strongly believe in incorporating the human factors principles in aviation maintenance In this their second of two volumes they place particular emphasis on applying human factors principles in a book intended to serve as a practical guide as well as an academic text Features include A real how to approach that serves as a companion to the previous volume Risk Management and Error Reduction in Aviation Maintenance Self reports of maintenance errors used throughout to illustrate the systemic susceptibility for errors as well as to discuss corresponding solutions Two tools a pre task scorecard and a post task scorecard introduced as means to measure individual as well as organizational safety performance Interpersonal trust and professionalism explored in detail Ethical and procedural issues associated with collection and analysis of both qualitative as well as quantitative safety data discussed The intended readership includes aviation maintenance personnel e g FAA type aircraft mechanics CAA type aircraft maintenance engineers maintenance managers regulators and aviation students Code of Federal Regulations ,1992 92-4301 to 92-4413 ,1992 Scientific and Technical Aerospace Reports ,1994 Aeronautical Engineering ,1991 Aviation Automation Charles E. Billings,2018-01-29 The advent of very compact very powerful digital computers has made it possible to automate a great many processes that formerly required large complex machinery Digital computers have made possible revolutionary changes in industry commerce and transportation This book an expansion and revision of the author s earlier technical papers on this subject describes the development of automation in aircraft and in the aviation system its likely evolution in the future and the effects that these technologies have had and will have on the human operators and managers of the system It suggests concepts that may be able to enhance human machine relationships in future systems The author focuses on the ability of human operators to work cooperatively with the constellation of machines they command and control because it is the interactions among these system elements that result in the system s success or failure whether in aviation or elsewhere Aviation automation has provided great social and technological benefits but these benefits have not come without cost In recent years new problems in aircraft have emerged due to failures in the human machine relationship These incidents and accidents have motivated this inquiry into aviation automation. Similar problems in the air traffic management system are predicted as it becomes more fully automated. In particular, incidents and accidents have occurred which suggest that the principle problems with today's aviation automation are associated with its complexity, coupling, autonomy, and opacity. These problems are not unique to aviation; they exist in other highly dynamic domains as well. The author suggests that a different approach to automation called human-centered automation offers potential benefits for system performance by enabling a more cooperative human-machine relationship in the control and management of aircraft and air traffic.
