and Susan Shaman argue that too many institutional leaders and policy makers do not understand how deeply the consumer markets they promoted have changed American higher education. Instead of functioning as a single integrated industry, higher education is in fact a collection of segmented and more or less separate markets. These markets have their own distinctive operating constraints and logics, especially regarding price. But those most responsible for federal higher education policy have made a muck of the enterprise while state policy making has all but disappeared, the victim of weak imaginations, insufficient funding, and an aversion to targeted investment. Chapter by chapter, this compelling text draws on new data developed by the authors in a Gates Foundation funded project to describe the landscape: how the market for higher education distributes students among competing institutions; what the job market is looking for; how markets differ across the fifty states; and how the higher education market determines the kinds of faculty at different kinds of institutions. The volume concludes with a three-pronged set of policies for making American higher education mission-centered as well as market-smart. Although there is no one-size-fits-all approach for reforming higher education, this clearly written book will productively advance understanding of the challenges colleges and universities face by providing a mapping of the configuration of the market for an undergraduate education.

Becoming a Professor Marie K. Iding, R. Murray

Thomas, 2015-03-08 Becoming a Professor is designed primarily for graduate and undergraduate students and others: instructors, lecturers, and new tenure-track professors contemplating careers as professors in post-secondary education at colleges, institutes, and universities. The book identifies kinds of higher education institutions and types of teaching positions, along with the nature of each position's responsibilities and advantages and disadvantages. It explains how graduate students can promote their future as faculty members while they are still in graduate school and suggests ways to find suitable faculty positions and succeed at the application and interview process. The book also addresses a range of other matters that influence careers in higher education: once a candidate is hired in a faculty position, such matters as the tenure and promotion process and how to succeed in other aspects of the professorial role, research, service, teaching, and as well as how to avoid pitfalls, political and ethical aspects in such positions.
