

Cued Retelling Directions

Cued retelling is an excellent way to improve students' reading speed and reading comprehension. It provides added layers of support for weak readers and challenges strong readers to remember more. I have personally seen this process work from early grade levels (grades 1-5) and at the middle and high school level. If it is combined with the restructured reading applications there is an incredible opportunity to improve reading ability.

Allen, Richard

It is important that the teacher controls all of the options for introducing students to the procedure. The teacher also needs to know the reading level of the materials provided and of course the reading ability of the students they will be working with.

1. If not a reading that you think will take your students approximately 10-15 minutes to read.
2. Develop the cued retelling form prior to the class and have copies available for the students to use after the reading.
3. Although the students will read the materials individually, have your student pairs pre-determined.
4. Explain the directions to the students. (You are assigned to read the passage for a specific amount of time. If you finish early, you may want to look over the materials again. You will hold accountable for the reading on try and remember their as much as you can. You will not be permitted to look at your notes or the reading after the time is up. Please be quietly as other may not have finished their reading.)
5. After the students have completed the reading break them into their pairs. If this is their first attempt at the strategy then you will want to spend some time going over the idea of cued or cue giving. The purpose is not to tell their partners the answer but that a way for them to give you the correct response. Students are allowed to give up to three cues for each item their partner misses. If after three cues they fail to come up with the correct response then they should tell them to right answer and move on to the next item they missed. Have students look carefully at the cued retelling form. You may want to make an overhead of a blank version so that students may see and listen to your directions. The idea is to make it so that their partners can remember without prompts of cues. All of the items remembered without prompting are checked off in the column labelled "I see it". Once they have run out of things that they can recall then the partner with the main idea form begins the cued process. Once cueding has begun they check off all of the remaining items in the column labelled "I see it". When all of the items have been covered they then switch roles. Provide students with a clean red form.

This is a very helpful format different reading levels of the same materials is perfect. I use the ideas on restructured reading in the 100-Hill manual on the web site under language arts.

Richard Thomas, should we have it set up with 1. Study, second reading is doing to see and the other team read and look a student reader. If on a first read some the restructured reader look for restructured. This provides extra layers of support for the weak reader as well as the strong. It is their turn to read what they recall. When I am after time is up some in reading. In my experience with weak readers they probably feel after they have although failed all reading. Today however, they will have a shot from the 1.

As students improve with their reading abilities you have 2 options to continue challenging your students. It used 75% time recall at the bottom mark for change.

1. Reduce the time you give them to read it I never let this get below 10 minutes.)
2. Give them a longer passage to read and the same amount of time.
3. Make the reading more difficult or making the reading level higher.
