Questions and Answers

and peg in a square hole. What if...

Here's a list of why you shouldn't use EAV:

- You can't use data types. It doesn't matter if the value is a date, a number or a string, it's always going to be coerced to varchar. This can be anything from a minor performance hit to a massive gut-ache (ever had to chase down a one-cent variation in a month's sales?).
- You can't (easily) enforce constraints. It requires a ridiculous amount of code to enforce "Everyone needs to have a height between 0 and 3 metres" or "Age must be no less than 18" as opposed to the 1-2 lines that each of those constraints would be in a properly designed system.
- Related to above, you can't easily guarantee that you get the information you need. (e.g. if age might be missing from one, then the next might be missing their height etc.) but it's a hell of a lot more difficult than `select height, weight, age FROM Client` is null or weight is null.
- Related again, duplicate data is a lot harder to detect (what happens if they give you the same client? De-EAV'ing the data, as below, will give you two rows of results if you have the attribute doubled. If one client has two separate entries for two attributes, you'll get the query below).
- You can't even guarantee that the attribute names are consistent. "Age_yr" might be "AGE_IN_YEARS" or "age". (Admittedly this is less of a problem when you're receiving data versus when people are entering data, but still.)
- Any sort of non-trivial query is a complete disaster. To relationalise a three-attribute EAV table you can query it in a relational fashion requires three joins of the EAV table.

Example:

SELECT col_id, val AS [val], col_name AS [height], col_value AS [age]
FROM client
LEFT JOIN client_val ON client_val.col_id = col_id AND client_val.col_name = 'height'
LEFT JOIN client_val ON client_val.col_id = col_id AND client_val.col_name = 'age'
WHERE client_val.col_id = col_id AND client_val.col_name = 'height'
AND client_val.col_id = col_id AND client_val.col_name = 'age'
