historic structure report HSR a document that evaluates all aspects of a property to minimize damage during restoration The only book of its kind this practical guide walks readers through the process of compiling an HSR From gathering historical and archival data about the property to analyzing its structural mechanical and electrical components to assessing the state of its interior finish including wood masonry and metals this book covers all the nuts and bolts of an expertly written informative HSR Explaining what information should be included in each section and how investigators can work together effectively as a team to produce a comprehensive coherent report this handbook is one no professional should be without

Historic Rehabilitation and the Living Building Challenge : a Compatibility Analysis Esther Looker,2018 Every year one billion square feet of buildings are demolished and reconstructed in the United States and it is estimated that a quarter of our existing building stock will be demolished and replaced by 2030 Meeks however one should ask what is being lost when we demolish old buildings particularly if those buildings possess some historic significance Furthermore demolition and construction place a substantial burden on the environment by way of waste creation resource demand and through loss of embodied energy At a time when climate change water and air pollution resource depletion land degradation habitat destruction and loss of biodiversity are immediate and pressing environmental concerns it may be more important now than ever before that we consider the relationship between the built and natural environments One might argue that environmental protection and sustainability concerns necessitate replacing old inefficient buildings with new environmentally friendly ones yet preservationists would argue that reusing historic buildings is the ultimate recycling project and that the greenest building is one that is already built Elefante 2012 Introduction      Historic Preservation Handbook J. Kirk Irwin,2002-11 A practical guide to understanding historic architecture and its preservation Shows how to analyze and evaluate historic buildings in order to better renovate existing ones and create outstanding new ones Heavily illustrated with plans diagrams and photos      Rehabilitating Older and Historic Buildings Stephen L. Kass,Judith M. LaBelle,David A. Hansell,1993      Affordable Housing Through Historic Preservation Susan M. Escherich,Stephen J. Farneth,Bruce D. Judd,1996-12 A guide for developers of affordable housing on how to work with the U S Secretary of the Interior Contents benefits of rehabilitating historic buildings for affordable housing benefits to owners and developers benefits to tenants benefits to the community a successful approach to rehabilitation and solving common design issues in historic buildings and 11 case studies of successful projects Appendices Federal section 106 review state and local environmental review and historic building codes Glossary and bibliography      From Archaic to Contemporary Nisha Borgohain,2019 Over recent decades the global focus on climate change and on conservation of resources has brought about a paradigm shift in the adaptive reuse of old and historic buildings Adaptive reuse is now seen as a key factor in the conservation of land and environment preservation of cultural identity and reduction of urban sprawl Increasingly engineers architects and urban planners are making concerted efforts to realize the reuse potential of existing and outdated structures Therefore those involved in building design have studied the viability of adaptive reuse and generally favor the repurposing of old historic buildings to suit new patterns of occupancy and use without disturbing the environment or increasing carbon footprints Redesign and reconstruction through refurbishment remodeling renewal repair and retrofitting is carried out to meet new requirements and provide performance that was not in the original design Buildings are one of the largest energy users in the United States 1 In total buildings used around 40 percent of energy in 2015 which accounts for the largest share among forms of energy consumption Many of the buildings are not energy efficient but do have historic value while giving them a new purpose their historic legacy can also be preserved There are many challenges like program modification feasibility structural issues and energy efficiency which need to be addressed during pre construction and can be addressed by careful planning and innovative techniques To understand the various challenges involving adaptive reuse this study employs the Clark Hall at the University of Massachusetts to test the efficacy of design and performance interventions Clark Hall was originally used for science classes and botany research and later was converted into painting studios Presently the building structure is still intact provides enough room for program modification and has significant reuse potential Therefore Clark Hall is a suitable candidate for adaptive reuse as an academic office building that satisfies contemporary building standards and meets the growing demand for office space Through this project an attempt has been made to explore and understand the complexities and challenges as well as the various possible ways to change the function of Clark Hall from a defunct structure to a modern energy efficient and environmentally sustainable academic office building with measures for energy conservation through contemporary innovative design approaches The research work begins with a background study of the building s history and its different purposes along with three precedent studies of contemporary and innovative design examples It also identifies relevant local federal and state building and zoning regulations and incorporates existing energy saving technologies and materials appropriate to Clark Hall Keeping in mind the financial viability of project an attempt has been made to control and bring down the operating and the maintenance costs by carrying out extensive energy modelling and simulations to support these recommendations In conclusion the final outcome of my project is a design plan for the adaptive reuse of Clark Hall as a new energy efficient and environmentally sustainable office building for the benefit and the use of University of Massachusetts Amherst that mitigates costs and improves design utility and aesthetics while preserving its historic value 1 According to the U S Energy Information Administration in 2017 about 39% of total U S energy consumption was consumed by the residential and commercial sectors <https://www.eia.gov/tools/faqs/faq.php?id=86&dt=1> October 2018 Reusing Old Buildings ,1984 The Evaluation of Historic Buildings Harold Kalman,1980 The Preparation and Use of Historic Structure Reports Deborah Slaton,2005 Explains the purpose of historic structure reports describes their value to the preservation of significant historic properties outlines how reports are commissioned and prepared and recommends an organizational format for such reports Retired, Rehabbed, Reborn Robert A.
