Cultivating Regionalism Kenneth H. Wheeler, 2011-11-01 In this ambitious book Kenneth Wheeler revises our understanding of the nineteenth century American Midwest by reconsidering an institution that was pivotal in its making the small college During the antebellum decades Americans built a remarkable number of colleges in the Midwest that would help cultivate their regional identity Through higher education the values of people living north and west of the Ohio River formed the basis of a new Midwestern culture Cultivating Regionalism shows how college founders built robust institutions of higher learning in this socially and ethnically diverse milieu Contrary to conventional wisdom these colleges were much different than their counterparts in the East and South not derivative of them as many historians suggest Manual labor programs for instance nurtured a Midwestern zeal for connecting mind and body And the coeducation of men and women at these schools exploded gender norms throughout the region Students emerging from these colleges would ultimately shape the ethos of the Progressive era and in large numbers take up scientific investigation as an expression of their egalitarian production oriented training More than a history of these antebellum schools this elegantly conceived work exposes the interplay in regionalism between thought and action who antebellum Midwesterners imagined they were and how they built their colleges in distinct ways The Oxford Handbook of U.S. Women's Social Movement Activism Holly J. Brandt, 2008-10-01 In this book David E Brandt examines the legal psychological and cultural issues relevant to understanding antisocial behavior in adolescence Based on his own research and a broad analysis of recent work in the field Brandt identifies the factors that are common in cases of delinquency The discussion considers the long term effects of social issues such as poverty as well as psychological issues such as the high levels of stress and anxiety suffered during childhood by many delinquents He shows how a failure to meet the developmental needs of children at both the family level and at a broader social and political level is at the core of the problem of juvenile delinquency Brandt concludes with an inquiry into how best to prevent delinquency Programs that address the developmental needs of children Brandt argues are more effective than policing juvenile courts or incarceration      Resources in Women's Educational Equity: Special Issue, 1979
