Petty,Jon A. Krosnick,2014-01-14 Social psychologists have long recognized the possibility that attitudes might differ from one another in terms of their strength but only recently had the profound implications of this view been explored Yet because investigators in the area were pursuing interesting but independent programs of research exploring different aspects of strength there was little articulation of assumptions underlying the work and little effort to establish a common research agenda The goals of this book are to highlight these assumptions to review the discoveries this work has produced and to suggest directions for future work in the area The chapter authors include individuals who have made significant contributions to the published literature and represent a diversity of perspectives on the topic In addition to providing an overview of the broad area of attitude strength particular chapters deal in depth with specific features of attitudes related to strength and integrate the diverse bodies of relevant theory and empirical evidence The book will be of interest to graduate students initiating work on attitudes as well as to longstanding scholars in the field Because of the many potential directions for application of work on attitude strength to amelioration of social problems the book will be valuable to scholars in various applied disciplines such as political science marketing sociology public opinion and others studying attitudinal phenomena

Paying tribute to this irreducible plurality the volume sets out to develop interpretative takes on the phenomenological tradition which transcend both its naive celebration and its brute rejection to re-articulate the positions of other philosophers within the framework of Husserl's thought and to engage in an investigative dialogue between traditionally opposed camps within phenomenology and beyond

The Expectations of Morality Gregory Mellema, 2004 Moral expectation is a concept with which all of us are well acquainted. Already as children we learn that certain courses of action are expected of us. We are expected to perform certain actions and we are expected to refrain from other actions. Furthermore we learn that something is morally wrong with the failure to do what we are morally expected to do. A central theme of this book is that moral expectation should not be confused with moral obligation. While we are morally expected to do everything we are obligated to do, a person can be morally expected to do some things that he or she is not morally obligated to do. Although moral expectation is a familiar notion it has not been the object of investigation in its own right. In the early chapters Mellema attempts to provide a philosophical account of this familiar notion, distinguish it from other types of expectations and show how it is possible to form false moral expectations. Subsequent chapters explore the role of moral expectation in agreements between people, analyze ways that people avoid moral expectation, illustrate how groups can have moral expectations and view moral expectation in the context of our relationship with divine beings. The final chapter provides insight into how moral expectation operates in people's professional lives.

Today the Future is Made - Chuukese Adolescents and their Expectations and Ambitions for the Future, Marketing of Tourism Experiences Noel Scott, Eric Laws, Philipp Boksberger, 2013-09-13 This book provides a review of the current theory and practice of experiential tourism and how it is marketed. Many societies today are characterised by widespread individual wealth of an order previously confined to the elite, with the consequence that ownership of ordinary physical goods is no longer a distinguishing factor. Instead people are now seeking the extraordinary, with examples being bodies enhanced through surgery, personal fitness trainers and, in the case of leisure and tourism, seeking unique and unusual places to visit and activities to undertake. This trend manifests in the increasing consumption of services and the addition of experiential elements to physical goods by businesses aware of societal changes. The trend is enhanced by rapidly changing technology and economic production methods providing new sectors of the world's population with access to the consumption experiences that are repeatedly featured in the media. This is the experience economy, characterised by a search by consumers for fantasies, feelings and fun. This book was based on a special issue of Journal of Hospitality Marketing Management.

A Theory of Legitimate Expectations for Public Administration Alexander Brown,2017-11-28 It is an unfortunate but unavoidable feature of even well ordered democratic societies that governmental administrative agencies often create legitimate expectations procedural or substantive on the part of non governmental agents individual citizens groups businesses organizations institutions and instrumentalities but find themselves unable to fulfil those expectations for reasons of justice the public interest severe financial constraints and sometimes harsh political realities How governmental administrative agencies operating on behalf of society handle the creation and frustration of legitimate expectations implicates a whole host of values that we have reason to care about including under non ideal conditions not least justice fairness autonomy the rule of law responsible uses of power credible commitments reliance interests security of expectations stability democracy parliamentary supremacy and legitimate authority This book develops a new theory of legitimate expectations for public administration drawing on normative arguments from political and legal theory Brown begins by offering a new account of the legitimacy of legitimate expectations He argues that it is the very responsibility of governmental administrative agencies for creating expectations that ought to ground legitimacy as opposed to the justice or the legitimate authority of those agencies and expectations He also clarifies some of the main ways in which agencies can be responsible for creating expectations Moreover he argues that governmental administrative agencies should be held liable for losses they directly cause by creating and then frustrating legitimate expectations on the part of non governmental agents and if liable have an obligation to make adequate compensation payments in respect of those losses
