STUDYING THE SCIENCE OF THE MIND
 Students who are interested in psychology, biology, and the human mind will find this program a great fit. The program is designed to provide students with a strong foundation in the sciences and the humanities, and to prepare them for careers in research, education, and public service.

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were randomly assigned to either a training group or a control group. The training group performed a 12-week program of aerobic and resistance training. The control group did not exercise. Physical fitness was measured by a battery of tests including a 10-minute step test, a 1-mile walk test, and a 1-mile run test. Health-related quality of life was measured by the SF-36 questionnaire. The results showed that the training group had significantly higher levels of physical fitness and health-related quality of life than the control group at the end of the 12-week program. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve physical fitness and health-related quality of life in sedentary, middle-aged women.
